June 10, 1962

I am very glad to know that the Sacred Books of the East, published years ago by the Clarendon Press, Oxford, which have been out-of-print for a number of years, will now be available to all students of religion and philosophy. The enterprise of the publishers is commendable and I hope the books will be widely read.

S. RADHAKRISHNAN

PUBLISHER'S NOTE

First, the man distinguished between eternal and perishable. Later he discovered within himself the germ of the Eternal. This discovery was an epoch in the history of the human mind and the East was the first to discover it.

To watch in the Sacred Books of the East the dawn of this religious consciousness of man, must always remain one of the most inspiring and hallowing sights in the whole history of the world. In order to have a solid foundation for a comparative study of the Religions of the East, we must have before all things, complete and thoroughly faithful translation of their Sacred Books in which some of the ancient sayings were preserved because they were so true and so striking that they could not be forgotten. They contained eternal truths, expressed for the first time in human language.

With profoundest reverence for Dr. S. Radhakrishnan, President of India, who inspired us for the task; our deep sense of gratitude for Dr. C. D. Deshmukh & Dr. D. S. Kothari, for encouraging assistance; esteemed appreciation of UNESCO for the warm endorsement of the cause; and finally with indebtedness to Dr. H. Rau, Director, Max Müller Bhawan, New Delhi, in procuring us the texts of the Series for reprint, we humbly conclude.

INTRODUCTION.

1. IN the summary account of the Spend Nask, given in the eighth book of the Dinkard, chapter XIV, it is stated in § 4 (see S. B. E., vol. xxxvii, p. 32) that many marvels, owing to Zaratûst, are published therein, 'just as there are some which, collected and selected, are noticed by the Dinkard manuscript.' This statement evidently refers to the seventh book of the Dinkard, which contains the legendary history of Zaratûst and his religion, related as a series of marvels extending from the creation to the resurrection of mankind. A much briefer account of some of the same details occurs at the beginning of the fifth book of the Dinkard, and appears to have been abridged from a compilation which was either derived partially from a foreign source, or prepared for the use of foreign proselytes. A third compilation of similar legends is found among the Selections of Zād-sparam. And a careful translation of these three Pahlavi Texts constitutes the Marvels of Zoroastrianism contained in this volume.

2. As the extent of Dk. VII is about 16,000 Pahlavi words (without allowing for one folio lost), it probably contains about four-fifths of the details included in the Spend Nask, the Pahlavi version of which has been estimated, in S. B. E., vol. xxxvii, p. 469, to extend to 20,500 words. It says very little about Zaratûst's conferences with the sacred beings (mentioned in Dk. VIII, xiv, 5, 6), and gives no description of the other world and the way thither (as reported ibid. 8). But it probably contains many verbatim extracts from other parts of the Pahlavi version of the Spend Nask, which appear, however, to have been previously collected in the Exposition of the Good Religion, an older M.S. than the Dinkard, which is quoted as an authority in Dk. VII, i, 2.

3. This seventh book commences with a detailed statement of the descent of the glorious ruling dynasty from the primeval man Gâyômard, through his descendants, the Pêsdâdian and Kayânian rulers, to Kâf-Vistâsp. Among the individuals, rarely mentioned elsewhere, are the sacred being Hadish (the protector of homesteads in the Visperad), Vâegered the brother of king Hôshâng, Pâtakhsrûbô king of the Arabs, and Aôshnar the chancellor of Kâf-Ûs. Zaratûst and the three millennial apostles are also mentioned, but the contents of this first chapter are probably derived from the Kitradâd Nask (see Dk. VII, xiii, 20) and from Yt. XIX, 25-93.

4. Chapter II begins the legendary history of Zaratûst with the descent of his glory, from the presence of Aûharmazd to the house in which Zaratûst's mother was about to be born; and, alarmed at her radiance, the Kavîgs and Karaps, or ruling priests of the district, oblige her father to send her away to another valley, where Pôrûshâspô resided, to whom she was afterwards married; and several legends are related, in which both the archangels and archdemons are active agents, which lead on to the birth of Zaratûst, thirty years before the end of the ninth millennium of the universe, and his complete genealogy is given.

5. Chapter III begins with his laughing at birth, and describes the ill-will of the Karaps, or priests of those times, and their many attempts to destroy him during his childhood, till he openly defied them at the age of seven. At the end of the ninth millennium, when he was thirty years old, as he was bringing Hôm-water out of the fourth effluent of the Dâtti river, he met the archangel Vohûmanô who had come to invite him to a conference with Aûharmazd, about which no details are given.

6. Chapter IV, however, proceeds to mention that, in two years, he returned from his first conference, by order of Aûharmazd, to preach his religion to the Kîgs and Karaps in the presence of their ruler, Aûrvâitâ-dang the Tûr. They seem to have listened attentively till he advocated Khvêtûkdas, when they demanded his death, and were supported by the Tûr's brother ; but the Tûr's son, who presided, remonstrated with them, and Aûrvâitâ-dang himself protected him, but refused to be converted. Zaratûst was afterwards sent to demand slaves and horses from Vêdvoîst, a rich Karap, who refused them arrogantly ; he also went to Parshad-gau in Sagastân and cured his bull with Hôm-water, whereupon Parshad-gau joined him in worship, but not in public. Zaratûst repulsed the demons as in Vd. XIX, 1-4 ; he is then tempted by a Karap in the form of Spendarmazd, whom he also repulses. And he is finally sent to the court of Vistâsp, where he is relentlessly opposed by the Kîgs and Karaps who obtained his imprisonment, during which he is saved from starvation by a miracle ; then some of the sacred beings arrive to assist him, and Vistâsp is at last converted, twelve years after the coming of the religion when Zaratûst went to his first conference with Aûharmazd.

7. Chapter V refers to the marvels of the last thirty-five years of Zaratûst's life, after Vistâsp's conversion, but says nothing about his own death, except that he departed to the best existence at the age of seventy-seven. It mentions the establishment of ordeals of thirty-three kinds, the victory of Vistâsp over Argasp the Khyôn, the useful works and advice of Zaratûst, the compilation of the Avesta, and the birth of Péshyôtan, the immortal ruler of Kangdez.

8. Chapter VI continues this account of marvels till the death of Vistâsp, which occurred forty-three years later. The legends related are about the presentation of a heavenly chariot to Vistâsp by the soul of an old hero Sritô who had been killed about 350 years before ; and regarding the coming of two high-priests from the southern regions of the earth, ten years after the departure of Zaratûst, to enquire about the religion.

9. Chapter VII relates the marvels occurring after the death of Vistâsp until the end of the sovereignty of Irân ; mentioning king Vohûmanô who was a grandson of Vistâsp, the high-priest Sênbôv who lived throughout the second century of the religion, the devastator Alexander the Great, the four successive high-priests who restore ortho-doxy in the fifth and sixth centuries of the religion, the apostate Rashn-rēsh of about the same period, king Artakhshatar the founder of the Sāsānian dynasty, his chancellor Tanvarš, Ātūrpād-i Māraspendān and his son surnamed Avarethrābzū, with an anonymous arch-apostate of their time, and then king Khūsrō Anōshērvān. Finally, it condemns the proceedings of the devastators in later times, whose names are not mentioned.

10. Chapter VIII deals with the ninth and tenth centuries of the religion, which bring the millennium of Zarātūst to a close. After a bitter lamentation over the anarchy in religion and government—in which parts of §§ 34 and 36 are taken from the Varstmānsar commentary on Yas. XXXII in Dk. IX, xxxii, 17, 20—it refers to the arrival of Kitrō-mēhōnō, 'him of the racial home,' a title of Pēshyōtanō, son of Vistāsp, and immortal ruler of Kangdez, who arrives with 150 disciples to restore the religion and destroy the wicked, including the Turkish demons, the Arabs, and the ecclesiastical Shēdāspō<sup>1</sup> (Theodosius?). In the thirtieth year before the end of this tenth millennium Aushēdar, the Developer of Righteousness, is born, and confers with the archangels at the end of the millennium, when the sun stands still for ten days and nights.

11. Chapter IX describes the eleventh millennium, that of Aushēdar, who produces much prosperity and progress which continue until the fifth century. Then the wizard Mahrkūs appears for seven years, and produces awful winters in four of them, in which most of mankind and animals perish, till he is himself destroyed by the Dāhmān Afšin. Afterwards, Yim's enclosure is opened to replenish the earth with animals and men who then begin to subsist more upon the milk of cattle, which is plentiful, and Ashavahistō interferes to diminish the slaughter of cattle. At the end of the fifth century two-thirds of the Irānians have become righteous, and in the thirtieth year before the end of this eleventh millennium Aushēdar-māh, the Developer of Worship, is born, and confers with the archangels at the end of the millennium, when the sun stands still for twenty days and nights.

12. Chapter X describes the twelfth millennium, that of Aûshêdar-mâh, during which mankind continue to improve, are better supplied, and have fewer wants, while deaths occur only through old age and the executioner. During the last fifty-three years, they leave off eating meat and subsist upon vegetables and milk, for which latter they substitute water for the last three years. But the old tyrant Dahâk breaks loose, and Kerésâspô has to be roused to smite him. In the thirtieth year before the end of this twelfth millennium Sôshâns, the Triumphant Benefiter, is born; Kai-Khûsrô and his companions afterwards arrive to assist him, and the sun stands still for thirty days and nights.

13. Chapter XI describes how Sôshâns and his assistants destroy all the evil remaining in the world, during the course of fifty-seven years, while mankind subsist for seventeen years on vegetables, thirty years on water, and ten years on spiritual food. And, at the end of these fifty-seven years, Aharman and the fiend are annihilated, and the renovation for the future existence occurs.

14. Several of the details described in Dk. VII are briefly mentioned in Dk. V, i-iv, where they are introduced by a statement of the siege of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar (Bâkht-Narsîh) assisted by Kai-Lôharâsp, father of Vîrstâsp. Excepting this account of the siege, in which the Jews are evidently called 'a congregation or tribe' (ram), and some remarks about the same 'tribe' at the end of Chapter IV, all the other details which are mentioned have reference only to Irânians; but they are said to be the sayings of Âtûr-farnbag as to the MS. which that tribe call really their Gyêmara (Chaps. I, 2, 3; IV, 8), as the name can be most plausibly read. Most of the strictly Irânian details have manifestly been derived from the same sources as were consulted by the writer of Dk. VII, that is, from the Pahlavi versions of the Spend and Kitradâd Nasks. It would probably be hazardous to suppose that the Jewish compilers of the Gemara could have had access to these sources, and it might be preferable to assume that Ātūr-farnbag was himself compiling a record of Zoroastrian traditions for the use of some converts from Judaism, to take the place of the Gemara of their former faith.

15. The Zaratūst-nāmak of Zād-spāram is contained in the latter half (Zs. XII-XXIII) of the first series of his Selections, the former half of which, being a paraphrase of the first half of the Bundahis, has been translated in S. B. E., vol. v, pp. 155-186. In Chapter XII Zād-spāram relates two of the earliest legends referring to Mazda-worship, which he had found in old MSS. The first of these describes the appearance of the archangel Spendarmad, wearing a golden sacred girdle, at the court of king Mānūskīhar, 428<sup>1</sup> years before the coming of the religion to Zaratūst when he went to his conference with the sacred beings. The other is the legend of the warrior Sritō, the seventh brother, who was sent by Kait-Ūs to kill the frontier-settling ox which threatened him, 300 years before the coming of the religion, with future execration by Zaratūst.

16. Chapter XIII refers to the descent of Zaratūst's glory upon his mother at her birth, and the combination of his spiritual and worldly natures; also detailing his genealogy. Chapter XIV describes the attempts of the demons to destroy him before and at his birth, when Vohūmanō entered his reasoning powers and made him laugh with delight and utter one form of the Ahunavair formula. Chapter XV is about the five Karap brothers, with their first cousins the Aūsikhishes, all descended from the demon of Wrath and a sister of king Mānūskīhar; also about the four brothers of Zaratūst who seem to be unmentioned elsewhere.

17. Chapter XVI details the attempts of one of the Karaps to destroy Zaratūst during his infancy, and the means by which he is preserved; it also explains who Rāgh and Nōdar were. In Chapter XVII one of the Karaps foretells the future success of Zaratūst. In Chapter XVIII his father hears him accused of folly, and takes him to a Karap to be cured. In Chapter XIX the chief Karap comes to the house of Zaratûst's father, and is invited to consecrate the food set before him ; but Zaratûst objects and a quarrel ensues, which so much disturbs the Karap that he leaves the house, and drops dead from his horse on the road home. In Chapter XX instances are given of Zaratûst's righteous desires, his compassionate assistance of people fording a river, his liberal disposition, his abandoning worldly desires, his pity for dogs, his wish for a good-looking wife, and his acceptance of progress even from the wicked, during his youth.

18. Chapter XXI relates that, at thirty years of age, on his way to the festival of spring, he saw in a vision all mankind following Mêdyômâh, his first cousin, into his presence. He then went on to the bank of the Dâith, and crossed its four channels, when he met Vohûmanô who led him to the assembly of the archangels, where he received instruction from Aûharmazd and saw the omniscient wisdom ; the archangels also subjected him to various ordeals.

19. Chapter XXII refers to his conferences with the seven archangels, each at a different place, and extending over ten years. In Chapter XXIII, Mêdyômâh is converted at the end of these ten years. The next two years are spent on the conversion of Vistâsp, in which Zaratûst is assisted by some of the sacred beings, and the narrative ends by giving the dates of several other conversions, births, and deaths. But after its 30th year the religion is disturbed and the monarchy contested ; referring, no doubt, to the effects of Alexander's conquest of Persia.

20. These three narratives appear to be the only connected statements of the Zoroastrian legend that remain extant in Pahlavi, and all three seem to be chiefly derived from the Sâsânian Pahlavi version of the Spend Nask, with some probable additions from the similar version of the Kîtradâd Nask, as may be gathered from the summary accounts of the contents of these Nasks given in Dk. VIII, xiii, 20-xiv, 15, and translated in S. B. E., vol. xxxvii, pp. 31-34. There are, however, allusions to other legends regarding Zarātūst to be found scattered about in Pahlavi literature, to which we shall return after mentioning the manuscript authorities for the texts translated in this volume.

21. The chief existing authority for the Pahlavi text of the Dinkard, Books III-IX, and the only independent one for Book VII, is the MS. B in Bombay, which has been fully described in S.B.E., vol. xxxvii, pp. xxxiii-xxxvii; it will therefore be sufficient here to give a short statement of the information which was there detailed at full length. This MS., written in 1659, was an unbound quarto volume of 392 folios when it was brought from Irân to Surat in 1783; after which time 70 folios became detached from various parts of the MS., but nearly all these had been discovered more than twenty years ago.

22. The writer of the MS. not only recorded the date of his own work, but also copied two previous colophons of his predecessors, with dates corresponding to A.D. 1516 and 1020, and it appears that there had been an intermediate copy about 1355. The MS. of 1020 had been copied at Bakdâd, possibly from the original MS. of the last editor of the Dinkard, which must have been completed about A.D. 900.

23. For the text of Dk. V we have a second authority, independent of B, in the MS. K43 at Kopenhagen (see S.B.E., vol. xxxvii, pp. xxxvii-viii), written shortly after 1594 and also descended from the MS. of 1020.

24. The Selections of Zâd-spâram are found in some of the old MSS., which also contain the Dâdistân-i Dinik (see S.B.E., vol. xvii, pp. xv-xvii). Of the two MSS. used for the text of Zâd-spâram's Zarâtûst-nâmak, K35 was brought from Irân to Kopenhagen in 1843. It has lost many folios, both at the beginning and end; but, before it was so mutilated, a copy (BK) of it was made, which is now in Bombay and contains a copy of its colophon, the date of which corresponds to A.D. 1592. For the text of Zs. xxii, 4-xxiv, 19, which has been lost from K35, the translator is indebted to this old copy. The other MS. authority T, belonging to Ervad Tehmuras in Bombay

(a copy of which has been used), is dated two generations earlier.

25. Regarding the period of Zād-sparam's career we are well informed by the date of the third Epistle of Mānūskīhar, corresponding to A.D. 881, at which time Zād-sparam was probably in the prime of life; but his Selections were certainly compiled as late as A.D. 900, or about the same time as the completion of the Dinkard. So that the Pahlavi texts, from which these three narratives of the Zoroastrian legends have been translated, were no doubt all written about A.D. 900, and the information they contain was nearly all derived from the Pahlavi versions of two of the Nasks.

26. We have reason to believe that the Pahlavi versions of Avesta texts were completed in the fourth century and revised in the sixth, after the downfall of the heretic Mazdak. This may not only be clearly inferred from the traditional account of the compilation and restorations of the Avesta and Zand, preserved in Dk. IV, 21-36, and translated in S. B. E., vol. xxxvii, pp. 412-418; but is also in accordance with the actual condition of the Pahlavi versions of the liturgical Avesta texts. With the exception of a few interpolated passages, the whole of these Pahlavi versions might have been written, or revised, in the time of king Shāhpūhar II (A.D. 309-379). And the exceptional passages mention no persons or events of a later date than the reign of king Khūsrō I (A.D. 531-578); being merely references to such persons as Mazdak, the heretic, and certain commentators who lived about that time.

27. If we examine the Zoroastrian legends, translated in this volume, we shall also find it difficult to discover a passage that clearly alludes to any historical personage of later date than Khūsrō I, who is named in Dk. V, iii, 3; VII, vii, 26, although the compiler of the Dinkard had the traditions of 250 years of Arab rule to draw upon for facts, if he had been disposed to continue the statements of the Pahlavi Spend Nask down to his own time. No doubt, these traditions may have intensified his denunciations of the devastators in Dk. VII, vii, 29-38; viii, 4-9, but, like most Pahlavi writers, he is careful not to mention Muhammadanism. Dk. VII, vii, 33, 34 seem to refer to some particular individual of this later time; but the references to Kaisar and Khâkân, the Turkish demons with dishevelled hair, the Arab, and Shêdâspô (Theodosius?) of Arûm, may all have been taken from a Pahlavi version revised in the time of Khâsrô I.

28. That the original Pahlavi version was translated from an Avesta text, though many Pahlavi commentaries were intermingled, appears certain. Apart from the numerous quotations from revelation (dēnō), which may be safely assumed to have had an Avesta original, there are many passages interspersed with glosses, such as the Pahlavi translators habitually used, as well as numerous sentences beginning with a verb, an Avesta peculiarity which generally disappears in an English translation. Regarding the age of this Avesta text it would be hazardous to speculate without further information than we yet possess.

29. The principal details connected with the Zoroastrian legends which have been noticed in other Pahlavi and Pâzand texts, with references to the passages where they occur, are as follows:—

Gôrûvan informed of the future coming of Zarathûst in Bd. IV, 4. Z.'s genealogy and family in Bd. XXXII, 1-10.

Summary account of Z. and Zoroastrianism, from the creation to the resurrection, in Dk. VIII, xiv, 1-15.

The abode of Z.'s father, when Z. was born, was on the bank of the Dârega river (Bd. XX, 32; XXIV, 15).

150 demons were prevented from destroying Z., before his birth, by the presence of a fire in his father's house (Sls. X, 4; XII, 11; Sd. XVI, 3).

Detailed account of the birth of Z. in Dk. IX, xxiv, 1-18.

When Z. first saw the archangels, he thought they were arch-demons (Ep. I, x, 9).

Omniscient wisdom temporarily conferred upon Z., and what he then saw (Dk. IX, viii, 1-6; Byt. I, 1-5; II, 5-22).

He saw the soul of Davâns tormented in hell, excepting one foot (AV. XXXII, 1-6; Sls. XII, 29; Sd. IV, 3-11).

He also saw a mortal with children and an immortal without any, and preferred the former (Dd. XXXVII, 43).

30. Beyond the frequent occurrence of the names of the chief actors in the traditions, there are not many references to the Zoroastrian legends in the extant Avesta. This is owing to the fact that three-fourths of the Avesta texts, including the Nasks specially devoted to these legends, have been lost. The chief references to them that still survive in the Avesta are as follows:—

The passing on of the kingly glory from ruler to ruler, from Haoshyangha to Kava-Haosrava, from Zarathustra to Kava-Vîstâspa and the Saoshyant, in Yt. XIX, 25-90.

There are also other references to Kava-Vistâspa, Frashastra, Gâmâspa, Pourukistâ, Maidhyômau, the Haekadaspas, Spitas, and Saoshyants. And the Fravashis of all the righteous persons receive homage in Yt. XIII. Of the unbelievers, the Karapans and Kavis are mentioned several times in the Gâthas and Yasts, including the Hôm Yast; and the Usikhsh once in the Gâthas.

31. So far as these references in the Avesta extend, they agree with the Pahlavi versions of the legends, and occasionally state some further particulars. We may, therefore, safely conclude that these Pahlavi versions present a fairly complete view of the Zoroastrian legends current in Sasanian times. But we have another means of testing this conclusion more fully in the Persian Zartust-nâmah, translated by Eastwick in the Appendix to The Parsi Religion, as contained in the Zand-Avasta, by John Wilson, D. D. (Bombay: 1843).

32. This Zartust-nâmah contains 1570 Persian couplets, composed by Zartust Bahram Pardû, apparently at the ancient city of Raj, and finished on August 12, 1278. But Eastwick's English translation was made from a good MS. of this poem, written by Dastûr Barzû Qiyamu-d-din (=Kâmidin) in 1636, belonging to the Wilson Collection and now in the library of Lord Crawford at Wigan. Zartust Bahram relates how a priest of Raj, named Kai-Kâus, son of Kai-Khusrû, showed him an old Pahlavi MS.

narrating the history of Zartust, and offered to interpret it, if he would undertake to paraphrase it, in Persian verse, for the information of others.

33. After mentioning Z.'s grandfather and father, descended from king Frédün, a frightful dream of his mother is related, in which she sees herself attacked by wild beasts eager for the destruction of her son, who drives them away. She relates her dream to an astrologer, who prognosticates a wonderful career for the unborn child ; but this dream is an addition to the Pahlavi texts.

34. The child is born, and laughs at birth, exciting admiration among the women and dismay among the magicians. Dürānsarūn, their chief, comes to see the child, and tries to kill him with a dagger ; but his hand is withered, and the magicians carry off the child, who is exposed to death from fire, oxen, horses, and wolves, but all in vain, as his mother brings him home safe on each occasion. Another magician, named Bartarūsh, then foretells that Z. cannot be destroyed, and will establish a new religion ; and he repeats this to the child's father, naming Gustāsp as his future protector. This narrative corresponds with Dk. VII, iii, 2-31 ; but then follows the addition that he was confided to the care of an old man, named Barzīn-karūs, till he completed his seventh year.

35. Then Dürānsarūn and Bartarūsh went together to see him, and tried their magic arts upon him in vain (ibid. 32, 33). Afterwards, when Z. was sick, Bartarūsh supplied him with filthy drugs, but he threw them on the ground, which seems to be another version of Zs. XVIII, 5, 6. Then follows a paraphrase of Dk. VII, iii, 34-48, and Zs. XX, 4, 5 ; XXI, 1-20, 23-27, with some additional remarks about worship and the Avesta being taught to Z. The conferences with the six archangels are more detailed than in Zs. XXII, and more ritualistic in their tendency.

36. When Z. returns to the earth, he is met by the demons and magicians, who oppose him, but are killed or dispersed by the utterance of an Avesta text ; in which account we have an extreme condensation of Dk. VII, iv, 36-46, 57-62. He then goes to the court of king Gustāsp, where he is hospitably received by the king, surrounded by his princes and wise men. With the latter Z. enters into argument, and overcomes them all successively. This is repeated, till all the learned of the realm are vanquished in argument, in the course of three successive days.

37. Then Z. produces the Avesta and Zand, and reads a chapter; but the king hesitates to accept it, until he learns more about it; and Z. retires to his lodgings. In the meantime, the wise men form a conspiracy to ruin Z., by secreting in his lodgings, with the connivance of his doorkeeper, many of the impure things used by sorcerers. The next day, while the king and Z. are examining the Avesta, the wise men denounce Z. as a sorcerer; his lodgings are searched, and the impurities are brought to the king, who becomes angry and commits Z. to prison.

38. Now the king had a magnificent black horse, and when Z. had been a week in prison, this horse fell sick, and was found with its four feet drawn up to its belly. When the king was informed, he summoned his wise men, but they could suggest no remedy; so the king and all his people remained fasting all day and lamenting, and the jailer forgot to take any food to Z. till the evening, when he told Z. about the state of the black horse.

39. Z. requested the jailer to inform the king that he could cure the horse; and the king, on hearing this the next day, releases Z., who undertakes to restore the horse's limbs to their natural state, on receiving four solemn promises, one for the cure of each leg. Three of these promises are that the king, his son Isfendiyâr (= Spend-dâd), and the queen, should each undertake to accept his religion and never forsake it; and the fourth promise is that the false accusation of sorcery, made by the wise men, should be investigated.

40. After each promise Z. prays vehemently, and each limb is restored to use. While, on the confession of Z.'s doorkeeper, the wise men are convicted of fraudulent deceit, and are sent to execution. The Persian version is here a highly embellished paraphrase of Dk. VII, iv, 64-70, especially in the horse episode.

41. King Gustāsp next asks Z. to pray for information as to the king's future position in the other world, also that he may become invulnerable, omniscient as to worldly affairs, and immortal; but Z. tells him that he must be satisfied with the first wish for himself, and the remaining three for other persons. The next day, while the king is sitting in court with Z. present, horsemen arrive, who are the archangels Bahman and Ardabahist, with the spirits of the Khârdâd and Gusâsp fires. They are sent to testify the truth of Z.'s mission, and to urge the king to accept the religion; this he does, and they then depart; when Z. informs the king that his four wishes will be granted, as he will soon see. For some of these details see Dk. VII, iv, 74-82.

42. Zartust then performs the Darun ceremony, having provided wine, perfume, milk, and a pomegranate. After reciting prayers from the Avesta, he gives the wine to the king to drink, who then falls into a trance and sees his own future position in heaven, and those of others. His son Peshôtan receives the milk which makes him immortal. The perfume, or incense, is given to Gâmâsp who obtains knowledge of all events till the resurrection. And Isfendyâr, the warlike son of Gustâsp, eats one grain of the pomegranate and becomes invulnerable. The Pahlavi versions are silent about the king's four wishes and their fulfilment, except such hints as may be conveyed in Dk. VII, iv, 84-86. Afterwards, Z. reads the Avesta to the king and comments upon it; concluding with praises of the creator.

43. To this narrative Zartust Bahrâm adds a further episode of Z. asking for immortality, at the time when he went with Bahman to confer with the creator. His request is refused, but the creator gives him a drop of liquid to drink, like honey, and he sees everything in both worlds, as in a vision. When he wakes up, he relates what he saw in heaven and hell; and also describes a tree with seven branches of gold, silver, copper, brass, lead, steel, and mixed iron, respectively, overshadowing the world. The creator explains that these seven branches represent seven powerful personages who arise in successive ages of the world. The golden branch is Z. himself, the silver is Gustasp, the copper is an Askâanian king, the brass is Ardashîr the Sâsânian, the lead is king Bahrâm (Gôr), the steel is Nôshêrvân who destroys the heretic Mazdak, and the mixed iron is the malicious monarch who upsets the true faith. Then follow many details of the lamentable evils which then occur; and when the Hazârahs<sup>1</sup> appear, the condition of Irân becomes still worse, as described in Byt. II, III, until the arrival of king Bahrâm the Hamâvand from India, and Peshôtan from Kangdîz, who restore the Irânian monarchy and religion.

44. This additional narrative is evidently a paraphrase of the Pahlavi Bahman Yast, translated in S. B. E., vol. v, pp. 191-235; and that Pahlavi text appears to be merely an enlarged edition of Fargard VII of the Sûdkar Nask, of which a short summary is given in Dk. IX, viii.

45. From the foregoing epitome of the Persian Zartust-nâmah, it will be evident that its author's information was a combination of the statements still surviving in Dk. VII and Zs. XII-XXIII, so far as they suited his fancy and convenience. Many statements are omitted, others either condensed, or greatly elaborated; but very few novelties can be detected, excepting such as are clearly due to the writer's own imagination. Whether any small residuum of these novelties can be attributed to other sources than the Persian writer's fancy, must remain doubtful until some older authority for such details is discovered.

46. With regard to Z.'s vision of heaven and hell, which is mentioned in Zartust Bahrâm's final episode, his immediate informant was certainly Byt. II, 11-13; but the original authority was the Spend Nask, as summarized in Dk. VIII, xiv, 7, 8, although Dk. VII omits this incident, and Zs. XXI, 21, 22 merely mentions the bodily appearance of the omniscient wisdom, without referring to Z.'s vision. The details of the conferences with the six archangels, which are summarized in Dk. VIII, xiv, 9, as having existed in the Spend Nask, are also omitted in Dk. VII, though briefly stated in Zs. XXII.

<sup>1</sup> Those specially belonging to the latter millenniums, probably meaning the people who were expected to make most of the last two centuries intolerably wicked.

47. It is worthy of notice that Z. was first sent to offer his religion to the Kigs and Karaps and their sovereign, Aūrvāstā-dang the Tûr (see Dk. VII, iv, 2-20), who seem to have received his doctrines favourably, excepting his advocacy of Khvētük-das<sup>1</sup>, which led to their rejection of his proposal. He was next sent to the Karap Vēdvōist (ibid. 21-28), whom Aūharmazd had hitherto befriended; but this Karap was rejected for illiberality and arrogance. Z. then went to Parshad-tôrâ in Sagastân (ibid. 31-35), taking some Hôm-water with him, to cure an infirm bull belonging to this chieftain, as soon as the latter had accepted the religion in public; the chieftain assented to the religion, though only privately, but this was sufficient to obtain the cure of his bull. It was only after these three trials that the conversion of king Vistâsp was attempted.

48. There is some difficulty in understanding the exact difference between the primeval religion and that taught by Zarathûst. When Dk. VII, i, 9-11 speaks of Aūharmazd talking with Masyê and Masyâôî; or Hadish tells them of Aûharmazd, the archangels, and the Ahunavair (ibid. 12, 13); or the sacred beings are said to have taught them the primitive arts (ibid. 14); or we are told of the existence of demons in the times of Hôshâng and Tâkhmôrup (ibid. 18, 19); or of Ashayahistô in the time of king Pâtakhsrôbô (ibid. 34); it may be urged that the mention of these beings in connection with the men of those times is no proof that their existence was known then. Because it only shows that the old writers, being satisfied that these beings existed in their own time and were immortal, only logically assumed that they must have existed in former times. The really weak point in their argument being the assumption of the existence of such beings in their own time.

49. Safer conclusions may be formed by noticing the dogmas that Zarātūst most strongly advocates and reprobates. When he goes to his first conference (Dk. VII, iii, 56-62) he goes in search of righteousness. When he went to Aūrvāitā-dang, as mentioned above, he advocated the praise of righteousness, scorn of the demons, and the observance of ceremonies; but it was only his scorn of the demons, which took the form of Khvētūk-das, that the Karaps really rejected. In Dk. VII, iv, 14, he says, 'worldly righteousness is the whole worship of the demons, and the end of the Mazda-worship of Z.' Though the Hōm plant was sacred before Z.'s birth (ibid. ii, 22-47), the Hōm-water (ibid. iv, 29-35) seems to have been a distinctive token of Z.'s religion; also chanting the Ahunavair (ibid. iv, 38, 41, 42, 56, 61) and the Avesta in general (ibid. 63). The perverted religion and demonizing of the Kīgs and Karaps appear to have been the worst faults he had to find with them (ibid. 64, 67). And the archangels tell Vistāsp that the world requires the good religion which proceeds through Z.'s recitation, so he should chant the Ahunavair and Ashem-vohū, and not worship the demons (ibid. 79, 80). Again, when Dūrāsrōb and Brādrōk-rēsh partake of food with Pōrūshāspō and Zarātūst (ibid. iii, 34, 38), the latter does not object to the form of worship proposed, but to the person selected to conduct it; and he then proclaims his own reverence for the righteous and the poor.

50. From these statements we may conclude that the old writers, who have handed down these legends from ancient times, were of opinion that Zarātūst was not so much the founder of a totally new religion, as he was a reformer who retained as much of the prior religion as was not seriously objectionable. While strongly insisting upon the necessity of reverencing all good spirits, he strictly prohibited all propitiation of evil spirits. His law was to resist and destroy all that is evil and injurious to man, and to respect and honour all that is good and beneficial to him. According to the legends, he seems to have found little gross idolatry, in the form of image-worship, to reprobate. From the times of the idol-worship encouraged by Dahāk in Bāpēl (Dk. VII, iv, 72), and of the destruction of the celebrated idol-temple on the shore of Lake Kēkast by Kai-Khūsrō (ibid. i, 39; Mkh. ii, 95), we find nothing in the legends about this form of idolatry, till 'the oppressiveness of infidelity and idol-worship,' shortly after the downfall of the Sāsānians, is lamented (Dk. VII, viii, 6). Demon-worship (ibid. iii, 35; iv, 30; vii, 17, 36, 37; viii, 7, 34), although a term sometimes applied to idolatry, seems to be often used in its literal sense of 'worship of evil spirits,' one form of which is described by Zaratūst (ibid. iv, 47-53).

51. Another interesting study, for which these Zoroastrian legends supply materials, is the traditional chronology which they contain; and how far it will be found, upon examination, to harmonize with the system stated in Bd. XXXIV, or to explain the manifest inaccuracies of that system. The matter is rather complicated, but the Zoroastrian system can be connected with the European system of chronology with some degree of probability.

52. The epoch of Zoroastrian chronology is 'the coming of the religion,' but it has long been doubtful whether this event was the birth of Zaratūst, or his going to conference with the sacred beings, or the acceptance of the religion by Vistāsp. Any doubt, however, as to the meaning of the phrase, has now been removed by the statement in Dk. VII, viii, 51, that the first century of the religion is that from the time when Zaratūst came forth to his conference, which event happened when he was thirty years old (ibid. iii, 51, 60, 62). It is also stated, in Bd. XXXIV, 7, that Vistāsp reigned thirty years before the coming of the religion, that is, before Zaratūst went to his conference. From these data it is evident that the traditional Zoroastrian chronology makes the birth of Zaratūst coincide with the accession of Vistāsp.

53. The nearest date to these events, which is well defined in both the Zoroastrian and European systems of chronology, is that of the death of Alexander, near mid-summer in B.C. 323, which Bd. XXXIV, 7, 8, places 272 years after the coming of the religion, that is, after the thirtieth year of Vistāsp's reign. And if this were the first year of the religion, the death of Alexander must have occurred in its 273rd year, according to the Bundahis.

54. But this has to be reconciled with the statement in Zs. XXIII, 12, that, after its 300th year, 'the religion is disturbed and the monarchy is contested,' which statement is expressed more definitely by AV. I, 2-6, when it asserts that the religion remained in purity for 300 years, but then Alexander came to Irân and destroyed the monarchy. If these statements be accepted literally, they imply that Alexander invaded Irân either in the 300th year of the religion, or shortly after that date, but certainly not before it. We cannot place Alexander's invasion of Irân itself at a later date than the battle of Gaugamela (B.C. 331); and if this were the 300th year of the religion, the death of Alexander (B.C. 323) must have occurred in its 308th, instead of its 273rd year, and the coming of the religion would have to be put back thirty-five years. This may be done with some plausibility by assuming an omission of thirty-five years between the reigns of Hûmâî and Dârât, where the Bundahis passes from traditional to historical personages. Alexander's invasion must also have been a good and sufficient reason for the dissolution of the hundred-disciplesdom, or priestly college, established by Sêñô, which lasted only till the 300th year, as Zs. XXIII, 11 informs us.

55. If we now adopt the abbreviations A. R. for 'anno religionis' and B. R. for 'before the religion', we are prepared to compile the following synopsis of Zoroastrian Chronology according to the millennial system of the Bundahis, extended to the end of time, but dealing only with traditional matters, combined with the European dates of the same events, deduced from the synchronism of A.R. 300 with B.C. 331, as stated above in § 54.—

B. R. 9000, B.C. 9630. Beginning of the first millennium of Time; and formation of the Fravashis, or primary ideas of the good creations, which remain insensible and motionless for 3000 years (Bd. I, 8; XXXIV, 1).

, 6000, B.C. 6630. Beginning of the fourth millennium, when the spiritual body of Zarathûst is framed together, and remains 3000 years with the archangels (Dk. VII, ii, 15, 16), while the primeval man and ox exist undisturbed in the world, because the evil spirit is confounded and powerless (Bd. I, 20, 22; III, 1, 3, 5; XXXIV, 1).

B. R. 3000, B.C. 3630. Beginning of the seventh millennium, when the evil spirit rushes into the creation on new-year's day, destroys the primeval ox, and distresses Gāyōmard, the primeval man (Bd. I, 20; III, 10-20, 24-27; XXXIV, 2). Z. appears to remain with the archangels for 2969 years longer.

" 2970, B.C. 3600. Gāyōmard passes away (Bd. III, 21-23; XXXIV, 2).

" 2930, B.C. 3560. Masyē and Masyāōī had grown up (Bd. XV, 2; XXXIV, 3).

" 2787, B.C. 3417. Accession of Hōshāng (Bd. XXXIV, 3).

" 2747, B.C. 3377. Accession of Tākhmōrup (ibid. 4).

" 2717, B.C. 3347. Accession of Yim (ibid.).

" 2000, B.C. 2630. Beginning of the eighth millennium. Accession of Dahāk (ibid. 4, 5).

" 1000, B.C. 1630. Beginning of the ninth millennium. Accession of Frēdūn (ibid. 5, 6).

" 500, B.C. 1130. Accession of Mānūskhar (ibid. 6).

" 428, B.C. 1058. Spendarmaz comes to Mānūskhar at the time of Frāsiyāv's irrigation works (Zs. XII, 3-6). The MSS. have B.R. 528, but to bring this date into the reign of Mānūskhar would be inconsistent with the millennial arrangement; while to assume a clerical error of one century is a probable explanation, as it makes the date more consistent with the allusion to Frāsiyāv, whose irrigation works, mentioned in Bd. XX, 34; XXI, 6, must have been carried out in the latter part of Mānūskhar's reign:

" 380, B.C. 1010. Accession of Aūzōbō (Bd. XXXIV, 6).

" 375, B.C. 1005. Accession of Kāf-Kobāz (ibid. 6, 7).

" 360, B.C. 990. Accession of Kāf-Ūs (ibid. 7).

" 300, B.C. 930. Zarātūst first mentioned by the ox that Sritō killed (Zs. XII, 7-20).

" 210, B.C. 840. Accession of Kāf-Khūsrōī (Bd. XXXIV, 7).

" 150, B.C. 780. Accession of Kāf-Loharāsp (ibid.).

" 45, B.C. 675. The Glory descends from heaven at the birth of Dūkdak (Zs. XIII, 1).

" 30, B.C. 660. Accession of Kāf-Vistāsp (Bd. XXXIV, 7).

Vohūmānd and Ashavahīrō descend into the world with a stem of Hōm (Dk. VII, ii, 34). Zarātūst is born (ibid. v 1).

B. R. 23, B.C. 653. Z. is seven years old when two Karaps visit his father, and Dürásrōbō dies (Dk. VII, iii, 32, 34, 45).

, 15, B.C. 645. Z. is fifteen years old when he and his four brothers ask for their shares of the family property (Zs. XX, 1).

, 10, B.C. 640. Z. leaves home at the age of twenty (ibid. 7).

A.R. 1, B.C. 630. Beginning of the tenth millennium. Z. goes forth to his conference with the sacred beings on the 45th day of the 31st year of Vistāsp's reign (Dk. VII, iii, 51-62; viii, 51; Zs. XXI, 1-4).

, 9, B.C. 628. Z. returns from his first conference in two years, and preaches to Aūrvātā-dang and the Karaps without success (Dk. VII, iv, 2-20).

, 11, B.C. 620. After his seventh conference, in the tenth year he goes to Vistāsp; Mēdyōmāh is also converted (ibid. 1, 65; Zs. XXI, 3; XXIII, 1, 2, 8).

, 13, B.C. 618. Twelve years after Z. went to conference, Vistāsp accepts the religion, though hindered for two years by the Karaps (Dk. VII, v, 1; Zs. XXIII, 5, 7).

, 20, B.C. 611. A Kavig, son of Kūndah, is converted (Zs. XXIII, 8).

, 30, B.C. 601. Defeat of Argāsp and his Khyons (ibid.).

, 40, B.C. 591. Vohānēm is born (ibid.). About this time the Avesta is written by Gāmāsp from the teaching of Z. (Dk. IV, 21; V, iii, 4; VII, v, 11).

, 48, B.C. 583. Z. passes away, or is killed, aged seventy-seven years and forty days, on the 41st day of the year (Dk. V, iii, 2; VII, v, 1; Zs. XXIII, 9).

, 58, B.C. 573. Arrival of the religion is known in all regions (Dk. VII, vi, 12).

, 63, B.C. 568. Frashēstar passes away (Zs. XXIII, 10).

, 64, B.C. 567. Gāmāsp passes away (ibid.).

, 73, B.C. 558. Hangātrush, son of Gāmāsp, passes away (ibid.).

, 80, B.C. 551. Asmōk-khanvalō passes away, and Akht the wizard is killed (ibid.).

, 91, B.C. 540. Accession of Vohūman, son of Spend-dād (Bd. XXXIV, 7, 8).

, 100, B.C. 531. Sēnō is born (Dk. VII, vii, 6).

, 200, B.C. 431. Sēnō passes away (ibid.; Zs. XXIII, 11).

, 203, B.C. 428. Accession of Hūmāf (Bd. XXXIV, 8).

[Here ends the fragment of the old millennial system preserved in the Bundahis which omits thirty-five years in

56. We must suppose that the millennial chronology, which the Bundahis discontinues in the middle of the tenth millennium, was originally completed to the end of Time, as attempted in this synopsis, in accordance with the statements in Byt. and Dk. But the allusions to future events and denunciations of coming evils were, no doubt, of a mythological or general character, such as those still surviving in Dk. VII, vii, 29-32; viii, 40, 41, 44-46, 48-60; ix-xi. Whenever we meet with seemingly prophetic descriptions and denunciations, which clearly allude to historical events, such as those in Dk. VII, vii, 3-28; viii, 2, 10, 23, 32-36, 42, 43, 47, 61, they must, of course, be treated as interpolations of a later date than the events themselves. And there are several passages that may belong to either class.

57. It has been already shown, in § 54, that the death of Alexander, which the Bundahis places in A.R. 273, must have occurred in A.R. 308 according to other traditional records. If this error of thirty-five years stood alone, it might be considered accidental; but when we find that the Bundahis supplies only 284 years for the Askānians, to fill up the whole interval of 548 years between Alexander and Ardashir, son of Pāpak, we must conclude that these two errors were intended for the purpose which they both fulfil, that of postponing the end of the tenth millennium. On the other hand, the Sāsānians who ruled for 425 years, are allowed 460 years in the Bundahis, which just counter-balances the thirty-five years omitted after the time of Hūmāt. This third error may be considered unintentional, as it probably arose from counting the year of each succession twice over, first in the reign of the deceased king, and again in that of his successor.

58. The extent to which the Bundahis chronology is distorted, by these three errors, will be better understood on inspection of the following tabular statement than from any description of the results, merely observing that the year of the religion (A.R.) is given according to Bundahis dates in the first column, and according to real dates in the second. Several intermediate events have been inserted, for the sake of illustration, and each of their Bundahis dates includes its proper proportion of the errors<sup>1</sup>:

59. The object of preparing this statement has been to ascertain the reason for the intentional errors in the Bundahis chronology, and the probable period at which they were introduced. It has been mentioned, in § 57, that the effect of both the errors, which are not accidental, has been to postpone the end of the tenth millennium, but they also postpone the dates of some other events which are mentioned in the Zoroastrian legends.

60. Thus, we are told in Dk. VII, vii, 9, that benightedness arises after A.R. 400, which is postponed by the errors from B. C. 231 to 78, but both of these times seem to have been equally unpropitious to the Zoroastrians. Then we learn (ibid. 10, 11) that in the fifth and sixth centuries, say A.R. 440–560, orthodoxy is still upheld by four successive high-priests. This period is postponed by the errors from B.C. 191–71 to 156–36 (see p. xxxi, n. 2), and Zoroastrianism was probably flourishing the whole time. So far, no reason for the alterations can be discovered, as the vague description of events, supplied by the old writer, appears to be just as applicable to the original periods as to the altered ones.

<sup>1</sup> The basis of calculation is the real date of each event and real century, but the Bd. date of each Bd. century. The only Bd. date are 284 years from the death of Alexander to the accession of Ardashir, and 460 years from the latter to the death of Yazdakard III, as stated in § 57.

61. We are further informed (Dk. VII, viii, 2-45) that much evil and misery occur in the ninth and tenth centuries (A.R. 800-1000), at all events until the birth of Aūshēdar (ibid. 55-57) in A.R. 971; and such events as war, invasion, fall of monarchy, oppression, persecution, infidelity, and apostasy are mentioned. Aūshēdar confers with the archangels in A.R. 1001 (ibid. 58-60), and the evils afterwards pass away till A.R. 1400-1500 (ibid. ix, 3), when frightful winters occur. The evil period A.R. 800-971 was originally A.D. 170-341, or from the middle of the reign of Vologeses III to the middle of that of Shahpūhar II. But the Bundahis postpones this period to A.D. 451-608, or from the time of the Armenian revolt in the reign of Yazdakard II, to that of the first total defeat of a Persian army by the Arabs near Dhū-Qār in the reign of Khūsrō II. The evil times were probably expected to continue till the end of the millennium, or later, as in the case of Zarātūst himself; for Aūshēdar does not go to his conference till A.R. 1001, and might not be expected to begin to preach till A.R. 1011. These dates, originally A.D. 371-381, comprising the remainder of the reign of Shahpūhar II, would be altered by Bd. to A.D. 636-645, a period which includes the last two great battles with the Arabs, that decided the downfall of the Sāsānian dynasty, though king Yazdakard III lived some six years longer as a fugitive<sup>1</sup>.

62. It is hardly possible that king Ardashir (A.D. 226-241) and his chancellor Tanwasar, when collecting and revising their sacred books, would have compiled the original traditional system of chronology, however general might have been the terms in which the evils were described by the records they possessed, because it would have been a voluntary confession that they had no power to remedy the evils of their own time. But if they found the system in an ancient document, they might have been quite willing to admit that evils existed, owing to their enemies, which would have become much worse if they had not been mitigated by their own exertions. In fact, an old document prophesying evil which actually occurred at the time specified, could be used as evidence of the truth of their religion, and would therefore be carefully preserved. And it is quite certain that, if they had altered the chronology of an old document which foretold the time of the downfall of the monarchy, they could not have correctly guessed that time before the downfall occurred. For these reasons we must conclude that the original system of chronology, handed down by the Bundahis, was neither compiled nor altered in the time of Ardashir.

63. For the long reign of Shahpūhar II (A.D. 309-379) the original tradition predicted not only a continuation of evil times, but also the birth and education of a new apostle, Aushēzar, for the next millennium, who was expected to put an end to evil for about four centuries. His birth was to take place in A.D. 341, and his conference was to commence in 371. These dates are so well defined that, if we could discover any important religious teacher to whom they could refer, we might be justified in believing that the original chronology was compiled in his time. Unfortunately, we know very little of the internal history of Persia during this reign; there was war with the Romans in 337-350 and 358-363, and on the eastern frontiers in the intervening period; also a persecution of the Christians, beginning about 339; all of which fairly represent the predicted evils.

64. Regarding the priesthood and religious history of the reign, we have only the traditions handed down in Pahlavi texts to guide us. In these we are told that Ātūrpād, son of Māraspend (Dk. VII, vii, 19), was born in the steel period (Dk. IX, viii, 4), and lived in the reign of king Shahpūhar II, son of Atharmasd (AV. p. 145 n), being high-priest over the religion (Dd. XXXVII, 36). He also collected and preserved the Nasks (Dk. VIII, i, 22), and, after he had proved his orthodoxy by ordeal (Sg. X, 70, 71), the king proclaimed his intention of not allowing any more heterodoxy (Dk. IV, 27<sup>1</sup>). In his old age he obtained a son, after devout prayer, and named him Zaratûst (Pandnâmak, 1); but this son also bore the Avesta title of Avarethrâbâu (Dk. VII, vii, 20, 21; VIII, xiii, 18), who is called the son of Râstare-vaghênt in Yt. XIII, 106, showing that this latter Avesta title was adopted by Âtûrpâd himself. Finally, we meet with another Âtûrpâd, son of Zaratûst, described in Peshotan's Dk. III, cxxxvii, 2, as high-priest in the reign of Yazdakard I (A. D. 399-420), son of Shahpûhar, and also mentioned in Pahl. Yas. p. 120, ll. 14, 15 Sp. (translated in Dk. VIII, i, 7 n.).

65. We have here, evidently, three successive high-priests, father, son, and grandson, and all celebrated men. The father had been employed in collecting and revising, or probably translating, some of the sacred books, and then, after a religious discussion, submitted himself to the ordeal of melted metal, as a test of his orthodoxy. The king was convinced, and his proclamation meant persecution of the heterodox, such as was commenced about A. D. 339, as regards the Christians. So that we may safely assume that Âtûrpâd's ordeal took place shortly before this date, and probably shortly after 337, when the Roman war commenced. As we must also certainly assume that the original chronology could not have come into existence at a much later date than 341, when so remarkable an event as the birth of a new apostle was fixed by it to occur, we have to consider who this apostle could have been; and whether it may not have been intended to identify him with Âtûrpâd's own son.

66. In the first place, is such a suspicion consistent with known dates? To represent Aushêdar, according to the original chronology, the son must have been born A. D. 341 (§ 63); and we may suppose that the time of Aushêdar's conference (371) would represent the time of Âtûrpâd's death, when his son succeeded him in the high-priesthood. If Ātūrpād were aged eighty-one at his death, he would have been fifty-one at the birth of his son, or approaching old age; and he would have been born in 290, or nineteen years before the king. His grandson may have been born in 365, when his father Zaratūst was twenty-four, and may have succeeded that father in the high-priesthood about 400, the second year of king Yasdakard I. As all these dates are reasonably consistent with the few facts that are known, there seems to be no impossibility in the hypothesis that the original chronology of Aūshēdar's birth may have had some connection with the date of the birth of Ātūrpād's son. The dates assumed, with regard to these three high-priests, which may be slightly varied, are as follows:—

Ātūrpād, born 290, high-priest 320, died 371.

Zaratūst, " 341, " 371, " 400.

Ātūrpād, " 365, " 400, " 420, or later.

67. On the other hand, we must recollect that the time of the birth of Aūshēdar was not an isolated date which could be varied at pleasure, to suit any circumstances that might arise; but it was intimately connected with the dates of birth of three other apostles, which were each placed at the same distance from the ends of three other millenniums. It would perhaps be more difficult to suit a new millennial system of chronology, to the accidental year of a particular child's birth, than to have the child born in a particular year of an old system already existing. And, if so, it may be safer to assume that Ātūrpād, knowing the year of the expected birth, took measures to secure the fulfilment of the prophecy, so far as the birth was concerned. If the child did not turn out so capable of regenerating the world as had been expected, that was a matter for posterity to explain. Under such circumstances of merely seeming fulfilment of a single particular, fraudulently obtained, the original prediction might be of any age.

68. It does not appear that the priestly councillors assembled by Khūsrō I (Byt. I, 7), made any alteration in the original chronology, although they slightly revised the Pahlavi Vendidad. In fact, the priests, who must have been long expecting the end of Zaratûst's millennium, were probably looking forward for the approaching downfall of the Sâsânian monarchy, which might readily be understood, as the surest sign of the termination of this period, from such statements as those in Dk. VII, viii, 1, 2. At any rate, the alterations in the chronology, for the purpose of postponing the end of the tenth millennium till A.D. 635, would not have been made till some time after the termination of the monarchy in 651, but probably long before the compilation of the Bundahis about 900. The effects of these alterations upon the dates of the evil ninth and tenth centuries, and upon those of the birth, conference, and preaching of Aûshêdar, have been already stated in § 61. And their object has evidently been to adapt the old predictions as much as possible to real events; for which purpose also, the predictions themselves have probably been often made more definite than they were originally.

69. It follows, from the foregoing investigation, that the original chronology must have existed A.D. 341, and, in fact, we have found no sufficient reason for supposing that it was compiled as late as Sâsânian times. While the alterations, we find in the Bundahis, could have hardly been made till after 651.

70. Regarding the age in which Zaratûst lived, the dates stated in the synopsis of traditional chronology (§ 55), are B.C. 660–583, while the reign of Vistâsp, which extends to the fabulous length of 120 years, or 660–540, evidently represents a short dynasty, including Hystaspes and his next four forefathers, if we accept the traditional identification of Vistâsp with the father of Darius I. But the names of those four forefathers, which are known on the unimpeachable authority of the Behistûn inscription of Darius himself, render it almost impossible to accept this traditional identification, as they differ totally from those of the forefathers of Vistâsp in the Avesta. The two dynasties are as follows:—

Behistûn : Hakhâmanis	Avesta : Kavi Kavâta
Kaispis	Kava Usa
Ariyâramna	Kava Husrava
Arshâma	Aurvadâspa

Unless it can be shown that these two series of names have the same meaning in two different languages, there seems little chance of proving the identity of the two dynasties. We may, however, quote the instances of the high-priest Ātûrpâd=Ātare-pâta and his son Zaratûst=Zarathustra being called Râstare-vaghent and Avarethra-bau, respectively, in the Avesta (see § 64); but these latter names seem more like titles than translations.

71. The date of Zoroaster and his religion has formerly been fully discussed by Windischmann<sup>2</sup> and others, and the question has been lately re-examined by Williams Jackson<sup>3</sup>. He divides the ancient statements, that have been made on the subject, into three classes: those which declare that Zaratûst lived before B.C. 6000, those which associate his name with Ninus and Semiramis, and the native tradition which, as we have seen, places his life in the period B.C. 660–583. Singularly enough, the oldest writers, those who lived only two to four centuries after the traditional period of the lifetime of Zaratûst, are those who report that he lived some 6000 years before that period. Pliny the Elder (Nat. Hist. XXX, 2) quotes Eudoxus (B.C. 368) as stating that Zaratûst existed 6000 years before the death of Plato, that is, B.C. 6347, which is also confirmed by Aristotle. And he quotes Hermippus (about B.C. 250) as placing him 5000 years before the Trojan war, that is, B.C. 6184. A third mode of describing this period seems to have been used by Xanthus of Lydia (B.C. 500-450)<sup>1</sup> who stated that Zarātūst lived 6000 years before Xerxes, as quoted by Diogenes Laertius, that is, B.C. 6485.

72. Three or four other classical writers mention similar statements, and Jackson points out that these extravagant dates are probably owing to the European writers misunderstanding Persian statements with reference to the pre-existence of Zarātūst's Fravashi. It will, in fact, be seen from the synopsis (§ 55) that the traditional account is that the spiritual body of Zarātūst was framed together as early as the beginning of the fourth millennium, which occurred B.C. 6630, and this may be accepted as a close approximation to the three dates, B.C. 6347, 6184, and 6485, indicated by the ancient writers, considering that their statements are made in even thousands of years.

73. Pliny also mentions, on the authority of other writers who are not named, that another Zoroaster, a Proconnesian, lived a little before the time of Osthanes who accompanied Xerxes to Greece (B.C. 480). And, so far as time is concerned, this Zoroaster might have been the traditional Zarātūst who died 103 years before this journey of Osthanes.

74. The old statements about Zoroaster or Oxyartes, the Magian king of Bactria in the time of Ninus and Semiramis, can hardly refer to the traditional Zarātūst who is never represented as a king, although the supreme Zarathustra of the Avesta was apparently a ruling priest. The time in which this Bactrian lived is also very uncertain, for though Semiramis has recently been placed about B.C. 800, her position in Albīrūnī's tables is certainly 1200 years earlier.

75. It seems, therefore, that the ancient statements, regarding the date of Zarātūst, reported by Pliny and corroborated by a few other classical writers, can be fully explained from the traditional system of chronology used in Pahlavi texts, by identifying the classical Zoroaster of the seventh millennium B.C. with the traditional Zarātūst.

in his ante-natal spiritual state, after he had ceased to be a mere Fravashi, or primary idea, and had become an intelligent, moving, and personal existence, but still a spirit. While the later Zoroaster of Pliny, who flourished before the fifth century B.C., must have lived about the same time as the same traditional Zaratûst after he came into the worldly existence, and may reasonably be identified with him, although Pliny had little information to give about him.

76. It will be noticed that this explanation depends entirely upon the peculiarly artificial system of the traditional chronology, in which the whole of time is assumed to consist of twelve millenniums devoted to different purposes; and if this particular system had not been in use at the time the statements, quoted by Pliny and Diogenes Laertius, were made, those statements could not have been explained as referring to the same individual. But if they do not refer to the same individual, we have only the options of rejecting all the statements, or believing an impossible date to be literally correct; neither of which decisions would be altogether satisfactory to a judicious mind. The only reasonable conclusion seems to be that the chronology based upon the twelve millenniums was in use in the fifth century B.C., about which time the earliest quoted statement seems to have been made.

77. It will also be observed that this millennial chronology is inextricably associated with the idea of the primeval existence of all good creations in the state of Fravashis. These are described as spiritual existences who remained three millenniums unthinking, unmoving, and intangible (Bd. I, 8); and the next three millenniums they still remained undisturbed by evil, mankind being represented, for that period, by Gâyômard in the world (Bd. XXXIV, 1) and by the spiritual form of Zaratûst in heaven (Dk. VII, ii, 15), while the animals were symbolized by the primeval ox for the same period. Six millenniums, which are half the duration of time, were thus appropriated to Fravashis, spiritual and embodied, probably before the birth of Plato, if we may rely upon classical statements; and it must have been before this date that the series of millenniums was arranged for all future history, till Time was expected to merge once more into Eternity at the renovation of the universe.

78. As we have seen that Zoroastrian tradition is very consistent in fixing the date of Zarātūst's activity about the end of the seventh century B.C., it may be asked, why have Avesta scholars so strongly insisted upon its greater antiquity? They may have had several reasons, but three, at least, were important. First, they had the classical statements which, as we have seen (§ 71), generally placed Zarātūst as far back as the seventh millennium B.C., on the testimony of persons who lived from two to four centuries after the traditional date of Zarātūst's death. No one, of course, could believe in the literal accuracy of the number of millenniums, which referred, as we have seen, to an imaginary period of spiritual existence; but this number was considered merely as an exaggeration which might be reduced to any amount that seemed reasonable. At the same time, this evidence for antiquity was quite sufficient, in the second place, to discredit the traditional date, of which these old authorities seemed ignorant, though it was a period then comparatively recent. And, if this discredit had not been sufficient to shake the faith of Avesta scholars in the traditional date of Zarātūst, they still had a third reason for their scepticism, when they discovered that the language of the Avesta was not merely a sister of Sanskrit, but that a large portion of it was sister to the oldest Sanskrit with which they were acquainted, and which appeared to them certainly older than the time of Gautama Buddha, who lived about one generation later than the traditional Zarātūst.

79. How far Avesta scholars were justified in their conclusions must be left for future ages to determine; at present we have no really historical information about the origin of Zoroastrianism, and must still consider it as decidedly prehistoric; though, it may be admitted that the Parsi calendar, as used in Persia, so far agrees with tradition, that it still bears witness to its own original institution in the reign of Darius Hystaspes, as will be seen from the following details.

80. The Parsi year consists of twelve months, each consisting of thirty days, with five additional days added at the end of the year, and the total number of 365 days never varies, so that, whenever a leap-year occurs in our calendar, the beginning of the Parsi year retreats one day in the Christian calendar. In this manner, the total number of days which the beginning of the Parsi year has retreated, since the institution of their calendar, records the number of leap-years which would have occurred in the same period of Christian years, if the regular leap-years had existed the whole time; and four times the number of leap-years would be the total number of years. But as leap-years have not been used the whole time, we have to calculate from astronomical data.

81. In the first place, we want to know at what season the Parsi year originally began, and we learn this from Bd. XXV, 7, 20, where we are told that the winter of the rectified year ends with the five extra days, and the spring begins with the first month; which means that the rectified year begins with the vernal equinox. We also have to observe that, retreating at the rate of one day every four years, the beginning of the year retreats all round the year in 1460 years; and we know from general history that the period, with which we have to deal, is much more than 1460 years and less than 2920. Then we have to ascertain the exact length of the tropical year, which astronomers say is 365.2422 days, with an infinitesimal decrement, quite inappreciable in the period we have in view.

82. We may calculate back from any vernal equinox which occurs not too far from noon, say that of March 22, 1865, when the beginning of the Parsi year, according to Persian reckoning, had retreated to August 24, 1864, or 210 days, in addition to a previous retreat of a whole year of 365 days, or altogether 575 days since the establishment of the calendar. So that the difference between the Parsi year of 365 days and the correct tropical year of 365.2422 days had then accumulated to a total of 575 days. Dividing the accumulated error of 575 days by the annual increment of 0.2422 of a day, we obtain a quotient of 2374 years, including A.D. 1865, as the time in which this error had accumulated, and this carries us back to B.C. 510 as an approximate date of the establishment of the Parsi calendar, with the first day of the year coinciding with the vernal equinox.

83. This date is, however, liable to some modifications for errors of observation on the part of the ancient astronomers, one of which errors, being constantly in one direction, must be taken into account. These old observers were not aware of the effect of refraction, which always makes the night seem somewhat shorter than it is in reality ; and this would lead them to antedate the vernal equinox by rather more than a day ; so that they would observe an apparent equinox in B.C. 505 on the same day in the Parsi year as that on which the real equinox occurred in B.C. 510. The most probable date of the establishment of the Parsi calendar is therefore B.C. 505, with a margin of four to eight years in either direction for accidental errors of observation.

84. A few years before this period we know, from the cuneiform inscriptions of Behistün, that Darius Hystaspes used an older calendar, when recording his early victories over insurgents, which consolidated his empire. It was a time when he was introducing many reforms in the government, and, being a believer in Auramazdā, his most influential advisers would probably be Zoroastrian priests. If they thought it necessary to reform the old calendar, the adoption of strictly Zoroastrian names for the new months and days in the Parsi calendar would be fully explained.

85. But, besides this ordinary civil calendar, in which new-year's day was constantly retreating, the Persians had a rectified calendar for religious purposes, which intercalated an extra month from time to time, for the purpose of bringing new-year's day forward again to the vernal equinox, and restoring the festivals to their proper seasons. It is this calendar which is used in Bd. XXV, and its days and months are distinguished by the epithet vehīkākīg (veh + īk + ak + īg), 'belonging to what is really good,' or vehīkāk, 'belonging to the really good,' which, in this connection, may be best expressed by the word 'rectified.'

86. This intercalation is described by Albirūnī in various passages<sup>1</sup> which inform us that, after the new-year's day had retreated more than a month from the vernal equinox, the king would order the priests to arrange for the solemn proclamation of an extra month to be intercalated, between the last month of the year and the five extra days, by merely moving those five days from the end of the twelfth month to the end of the first month of the next year. The effect of this was to put an extra month into the earlier year which, beginning with the first month, would also end with the first month augmented by the five extra days as the usual termination of the year. All following years would begin with the second month, and end with the first month and the five extra days, until the second intercalation, when a year of thirteen months and five days would be again obtained, by merely moving the five extra days to the end of the second month which would thus become the last month of the year, while the third month would begin the year until the third intercalation. By these means, any number of intercalations could be made without any additional month being named, and the position of the five extra days always indicated the end of the rectified year, and that the rectified first month, which followed them, was to become the last month of the preceding year at the next rectification, or intercalation.

87. If the Parsi calendar, as used in Persia, were established B.C. 505, as we have calculated, it ought to have been rectified by an intercalation of one month about each of the following years:—B.C. 381, 257, 133, 10, A.D. 115, 239, 363, 487, 610. Albirūnī (p. 121), however, has recorded only one intercalation of two months in the time of Yazdakard I (A.D. 399–420), son of Shahpūhar, when the five extra days were removed to the end of the original eighth month Ābān, where they remained until Albīrūni's own time (Alb. p. 56), about A.D. 1000. The reason for intercalating two months at once, was because the time for the seventh intercalation (A.D. 363) was already long past; so the eighth was added three or four score years in advance, being due in 487.

88. All that Albīrūni says about this double intercalation is quite in accordance with the original establishment of the calendar by Darius Hystaspes, and would render any date more than thirty-seven years later than his reign impossible<sup>1</sup>. With regard to the earlier intercalations (which must have occurred to account for the movement of the five extra days) that of A.D. 115 was neither in the reign of Vologeses I, nor in that of Vologeses III, one of whom must have been the Askānian renovator of the Avesta. That of A.D. 239, if carried out punctually, would have been at the extreme end of the reign of Ardashir; but the intercalations seem to have been usually delayed, as in the case of that of 363 which was delayed for thirty to fifty years, although it ought to have been carried out under the direction of one of those ultra-orthodox high-priests, Ātūrpāz son of Māraspend, or his son Zarātūst, in the reign of Shahpūhar II.

89. It is worthy of notice that the names of both the days and months, which have come down to us in this calendar of Darius, include the names of the six Amesha-spentas, which, according to Darmesteter's hypothesis, were not invented till the time of Vologeses I, in the first century A.D. We have positive evidence that the calendar of twelve months of thirty days each, with five extra days to complete the year, must have been established in the time of Darius. This fact being recorded mechanically by the extent of the retreat of the Persian Parsis' new-year's day down to the present time, and by the number of months intercalated in their religious calendar down to the fifth century A.D., being known from the position of the five extra days in the rectified calendar. We have no evidence of any change of names having been made in this calendar at any time; and only positive and indisputable evidence could be admitted, because reformers of calendars are hardly ever satisfied with mere change of names, and the calendar itself is a permanent witness that no alteration can have been made in any other particular, since the time of Darius.

90. Darmesteter's theory of a late origin for the Avesta having been mentioned, it may be allowable to add, that the likelihood of this theory does not increase upon closer examination. It is a brilliant hypothesis, very carefully prepared to meet ordinary criticism; but it does not appear to convince Avesta scholars in general, for want of sufficient evidence, as it is very necessary to distinguish carefully between possibilities and probabilities; the former being not admissible as evidence, unless corroborated by positive facts. Its chief use has been in checking the tendency to exaggerate the age of the Avesta, but it seems itself to be an exaggeration in the opposite direction, a returning swing of the ever-restless pendulum of judgment. On the other hand, the traditional age of the religion cannot be fairly considered as exaggerated, for the chief difficulty in accepting it as sufficiently old, is that the nearer our researches penetrate to that time the less real light we obtain.

OBSERVATIONS.

1. For all divisions into chapters and sections the translator is chiefly responsible, as the stops found in the manuscripts are not used systematically.

2. Italics are used for any English words which are not expressed, or fully understood, in the original text, but are added to complete the sense of the translation.

3. Italics occurring in Oriental words, or names, represent certain peculiar Oriental letters (see the 'Transliteration of Oriental Alphabets' at the end of this volume), or certain abbreviated modes of writing Pahlavi letters. Italic a, ā, b, d, e, ē, h, i, ī, kh, l, p, r, sh, u, v, z indicate no change of pronunciation; but g should be sounded like j, hv like wh, k like ch in 'church,' s like sh, and Avesta z like French j.

4. In the translation words in parentheses are merely explanatory of those that precede them, and often translate Pahlavi glosses in the original text.

5. For the meaning of the abbreviations, used in the notes, see the explanatory list after the Introduction.

6. The manuscripts used for the Dinkard are:—

B (written A.D. 1659), the only independent authority for Book VII; it was brought from Irân to Surat in 1783, and one folio, at the end of Chap. iv, appears to be missing.

K 43 (written A.D. 1594 and later), No. 43 in the University Library at København, which contains another independent authority for Book V in its later portion.

7. The manuscripts used for the Selections of Zād-spāram are:—

K 35 (probably written A.D. 1572), No. 35 in the same library, which was brought from Irân by Prof. Westergaard in 1843, along with No. 43.

DÎNKARD.—BOOK VII.

CHAPTER I.

1. For the gratification of the creator Aûharmazd, even through the complete superiority of the Mazda-worshipping religion, adorned by omniscience, in the world.

2. The seventh book is about the marvellousness of the greatest reminder of the Mazda-worshipping religion, Zarâtûst<sup>1</sup> of the Spitamas; also of the mindfulness of that illustrious one by Aûharmazd, and of his religion, arisen through the word of Aûharmazd, being blessed among those of the region of king Vistâsp; from the Exposition of the Good Religion<sup>2</sup>.

3. But, before that, there is purposely written whatever was the progress of the character and effect of the good religion and its first acceptor in the spiritual and worldly existences; and, after that, the prophets, apostles, and upholders in the period as far as Zaratûst, whose guardian spirit is reverenced, and their religion, which is this, due to the utterance and splendour with which they have been blessed with prophecy among mankind<sup>1</sup>.

4. According to the Mazda-worshipping religion and the Exposition of the Good Religion, it is the nature of Aûharmazd's disposition and his knowledge as to the complete obtainment of the first creature, the archangel Vohûmanô, and the first progress spiritually among the archangels and the other sacred beings of the spiritual and worldly existences, and materially in Gâyômard, the first man, through concurrent and complete acceptance from the creator Aûharmazd, and the needful atonement in his own period through meditation, and the smiting thereby of the fiend of that period and the opposition thereof, by thinking of the creator's teaching, that constitute the whole of that first utterance<sup>2</sup> of the religion of Aûharmazd.

5. According to the declaration of the good religion about the production of existence, which is the praise of him who was the cause of existence and creator, the beneficent spirit, the first craving among mankind was this, that 'we be happy and be the creation of Aûharmazd'; and the last, as regards the preservation of a remedy for mankind, is this, that 'the best is this, that the formation of lives be perfect now, though rendered sickly by him; and the spiritual existences of mankind be so now, though the destroyer has come to the creatures.' 6. For human beings of the lineage of Gâyômard this is the one thing good, when they shall perform their duty and good works; and one's work is to smite one's own opposing fiend; an instance presentable to any of the lineage, that it is important for every one of you to smite his own opposing fiend, is the freedom from molestation which occurs thereby, and the non-contamination of the creatures by the destroyer; and it is that effect which the creator of creation has produced for it.

7. And this, too, is declared by the good religion, that through a true-spoken statement Gâyômard attained to the good spiritual lordship<sup>1</sup> of the archangels (that is, he was fit for the supreme heaven<sup>2</sup>).

8. And after Gâyômard, at various periods until the ever-favouring<sup>3</sup> Zaratûst of the Spitâmas, whose guardian spirit is reverenced; much also was his acquaintance with knowledge, and his work was the preservation of the mankind of that time in which he came into notice; moreover he became requisite for conference with the creator; and because of their superior carrying on of destiny<sup>4</sup>, by command of the

creator, it is declared in the good religion, that the combined titles of prophet (vakhshvar), acceptor, and promoter are enumerated of them.

9. As Gāyōmard passed away, it<sup>1</sup> came to Masyē and Masyādī<sup>2</sup>, the second of worldly beings who were the progeny of Gāyōmard the first; and it is declared, by the word of Aṭharmazd, that he spoke to them, when they had been produced by him, thus: ' You are the men I produce, you are the parents of the parents of all embodied existence; and so do you men not worship the demons, for the possession of complete mindfulness is the best thing produced by me for you, so that you may fully observe duty and ordinances with complete mindfulness.' 10. And the bountifulness of Aṭharmazd was extolled by them, and they went on with their own duty; they also performed the will of the creator, enjoyed the advantage of the many duties of the world, and practised next-of-kin marriage for procreation, union, and the complete progress of the creations in the world, which are the best good works of mankind. 11. The creator showed them the sowing of corn, as declared in the words of Aṭharmazd thus: ' This is thine, O Masyē! which is an ox; thine, too, is this corn; and thine those other appliances; henceforth thou shouldest know them well.'

This must have also occurred twice in a previous copy of the MS. in § 28, where the word is written gān, 'life,' in the MS. B. In S. B. E., vol. xxxvii, Dk. VIII, xiii, 20, vakhsh has been erroneously translated 'word.'

<sup>2</sup> Literally 'man and woman' who grew up as plants from the earth fertilized by Gāyōmard, the prototype of the human race; see Bd. XV, 1-5.

12. This, too, is declared by the good religion, that Aûharmazd spoke to Hadish<sup>1</sup>, one of the sacred beings thoroughly worthy through righteousness, thus: 'O Hadish, who art thoroughly worthy through righteousness! thou shouldst proceed to Masyê and Masyâôl, thou shouldst procure thy<sup>2</sup> corn and bread from Masyê and Masyâôl, and shouldst bless theirs thus: "This corn comes up owing to you, and, as it came unto you from Aûharmazd and the archangels, may the corn extend from you unto your descendants without disturbance from the demons;" and two Ahunavairs<sup>3</sup> are to be recited for the staying away of the demon and fiend.'

13. And Hadish, the thoroughly worthy through righteousness, went to Masyê and Masyâôl, and he procured his corn and bread from Masyê and Masyâôl, and it was given by them; he also blessed them thus: 'May this corn come up from you, as from the archangels! as it came unto you from Aûharmazd and the archangels, may it extend from you unto your descendants, without disturbance from the demons;' and two Ahunavairs were recited by him, for the staying away of the demon and fiend.

14. And, owing to the explanation of the sacred beings, Masyê and Masyâôl attained also to the manufacture of clothing, the tending of sheep, house-building, and primitive carpentry, the agriculture and husbandry of the ancients, and the memory of their original state; and these proceeded from them through their lineage, presenting an example and spreading in the world, to artificers among the plenitude of artificers.

15. And after that, the destiny to be carried on came to Sāmak<sup>1</sup>, who was their son, and the descent of their collateral descendants was on to each region and each quarter of the world, to that extent which the creator chose for that region and quarter; and thereby there was a completion of the progress and spreading of mankind into the various regions and quarters.

16. At another time it came to Vāēgered and Hōshāng<sup>2</sup> of the early law (pēs-dād), for providing in the world the law of husbandry, or cultivation of the world, and of sovereignty or protection of the world. 17. And through their companionship and united force, given by religion, the sovereignty and cultivation of the world were prepared through progress and a succession of provisions of Aūharmazd's creatures, as well as the religion appointed by Aūharmazd. 18. And through that glory of destiny (gadō) two-thirds of the demons of Māzanō<sup>3</sup> and the seven evil-instructed ones<sup>4</sup> of Aēshm were destroyed by Hōshāng.

19. After that it came to Tākhmōrup<sup>5</sup> the well-armed, and through that glory the demon and evil mankind, the wizard and witch, were smitten by him; idolatry was also cast out by him, and he propagated in his time the reverence and service of the creator; the evil spirit, converted into the shape of a horse, was also carrying him for thirty winters.

20. And it came, at another time, for the conference with Aûharmazd, to Yim<sup>1</sup> the splendid, the son of Vivang,ha; and owing to his accepting the four classes of the religion, which are priesthood, warriorship, husbandry, and artisanship, there are the four classes which are priesthood, warriorship, husbandry, and artisanship, and thereby the world was improved, extended, and developed; he also rendered even the creatures, in a measure, immortal, undecaying, hungerless, thirstless, plentiful, and fully-settled. 21. And in the good religion<sup>2</sup> it is declared, by the word of the creator Aûharmazd to Yim, thus: 'Then do thou widen my world! (that is, make up its measure more), then do thou extend my world! (that is, make it up larger), and then thou shouldst accept from me the protection, nourishment, and chieftainship of the world; and do thou effect such watchfulness over it, that no one shall be able to occasion the wounding or injury of another.'

22. And this was accepted and done by Yim, as Aûharmazd commanded him; and through the same glory he widened the earth three-thirds larger than that which it was theretofore. 23. And, in that realm of his, the cattle and men of the realm were made immortal by him, and the other creations, water, vegetation, and the various foods, imperishable. 24. And this, too, is declared by the good religion, that the world was made by him like the supreme heaven in pleasantness; also the enclosure made by Yim, constructed by him according to all the commands of the creator<sup>3</sup>, about guarding the creatures from perishing through the winter of Mahrkûs, and likewise many other wonders are reported by the good religion.

25. And it came, at another time, by command of the creator, to Frêdûn the Âspigân<sup>1</sup> when he was in the pregnant womb, owing to the share of husbandry in the avocations of the religion, through allotment from the glory of Yim, and through its triumphant splendour: 26. And Frêdûn, through that triumphant splendour, became a responder to Dahâk<sup>2</sup> from the pregnant womb, and that degraded fiend was averted and paralysed by him; having come to nine years of age, he proceeded about his destruction, and through that victory Dahâk was smitten by him<sup>3</sup>, the creatures were saved and relieved thereby, those of Mâzandar and Mâda were smitten, their ravage and mischief were removed from the region of Khvantras, and the region of Khvantras was preserved for his three sons. 27. And owing to his husbandry, which is the third avocation of the religion, pestilence and disease were disturbed by the medical treatment even of pestilence itself, and he exhibited to mankind also many other wonders produced and useful occupation for the world.

28. And, in the life-time of Frêdûn, the same destiny came to Arik<sup>4</sup>, son of Frêdûn, owing to introduction by the creator, and was diffused in him, and he practised humility; the life<sup>5</sup> which is perfect is brought through a prayer from his father Frêdûn, and that life<sup>1</sup> came to him from the creator through the blessing of Frēdūn.

29. And it came, through his mother, to a descendant of Frēdūn and descendant of Aīrik; it proceeded with the angel Néryōsang to Mānūskihar<sup>2</sup>, and its entire progress was in the lineage of Aīrik. 30. And it came to Mānūskihar, the monarch of Irān, and through it many wonder-wrought actions were performed by him; he smote Salm and Tūg in revenge for Aīrik<sup>3</sup>; he was a responder to the superfluities of foreign countries, he arranged the realm of Irān, improved and fertilised the land of Irān, and made the country of Irān victorious over foreigners.

31. At another time it came to Aūzōbbō, son of Tāmāsp<sup>4</sup>, a descendant of Mānūskihar the monarch of Irān; and, through that destiny and glory combined; the new-born came to mature activity and the proportions of a man during childhood, through agriculture; he disclosed his lamenting mother to the countries of Irān, he marched on to the destruction of foreigners, to drive out and make them outcast from the land of Irān; he also defeated the village-terrifier of the country of Irān, the wizard who frightened his father and fellow-immortals, Frangrāsiyāk of Tūr<sup>5</sup>; and he developed and ferti-

At another time it came to Kerêšâspô the Sâmân<sup>1</sup>, owing to the share of warriorship which is the second avocation of the religion, through allotment from the glory of Yim<sup>2</sup>; and, through it, the serpent Srôbôvar which was swallowing horses and swallowing men, the golden-heeled demon Ganda-repô, and much other production of adversity by the demon and the fiend—the murderer of the creatures—were destroyed by him.

33. At another time it came to Kaf-Kobâd<sup>3</sup>, the progenitor of the Kayâns; through it he arranged the realm of Irân, he united the sovereignty with himself in the Kayân race, and he thereby occasioned much splendour and actions of advantage to the creatures.

34. And it came to Pâtakhsrôbô<sup>4</sup>, son of Airyêf-shvâ<sup>5</sup>, son of Tâz, who was king of the Arabs, through the mindfulness of the archangel Ashavahistô, and his enquiry about it from its own tribe<sup>6</sup>—for the demon of greediness (âzô), with one similarly corrupted into Frâstyâv, as it is also hereafter in Chap. II, 68; Zs. XII, 3.

<sup>5</sup> Or Airyêfshnig; evidently the same as Virafsang in Bd. XXXI, 6, which is spelt Avirafshanêg and Âirafshanig in two MSS. of the Irâjan Bundahis. Hence we may conclude that Pâtakhsrôbô was a brother of Zâinfâv, and a great-uncle of Dahâk; but how his daughters could have been married to the three sons of Frêzûn, as stated in the Kitradâd Nask (see Dk. VIII, xiii, 9), is a chronological difficulty that throws doubt upon this identification.

destined, had rushed for the destruction of him who was very gentle to that tribe<sup>1</sup>—as he had a full inclination for the ascendancy of the portion whose guidance to the lofty priestly master was owing to the archangel Ashavahistô, just as the fish image<sup>2</sup> of that other portion was for falling into the river; and it is declared that he came to the ceremonial of Zarathûst.

35. At another time it came to Kai-Arsh and his brothers<sup>3</sup>, the descendants of Kobâd; through it they have been all-experienced and powerful, heedful and performing wonders; and the eldest brother of them, Kai-Ûs, seized upon the sovereignty of the seven regions, and became very illustrious and full of glory. 36. At the same time it came to Aôshnar<sup>4</sup> who became fully sagacious (pûr-zîr), owing to the glory of Yim, when he was in his mother's womb, and many wonders were taught by him to his mother, through speaking from the mother's womb; also at his birth he vanquished the maleficent spirit by uttering answers to the questions of the deadly Frâkîh the demon-worshipper. 37. He also attained to the chancellorship (farmâdârih) of Kai-Ûs, and became administrator (räyinidâr) in his realm of the seven regions; the frontier speech (vimand-gôbisnîh) was also explained and taught by him, and much other learning of advantage to mankind who are unaffected by the utterance of replies of a foreigner; he also advised the Irâanian country with the best-instructed counsel.

38. And its coming to Kai-Siyâvakhsh<sup>1</sup> the illustrious, through the wondrous-formed Kangdes being held by him for the retention of protection for the much splendour and suitable glory of the religion, from which the restoration of time, the re-arrangement of the realm of Irân, and the reunion of power and triumph with the religion of Aûharmazd are manifest.

39. It came to Kai-Khûsrôî<sup>2</sup>, son of Styâvakhsh, and through it he smote and vanquished Frangâ-styâk<sup>3</sup> of Tûr, the wizard, and his fellow-miscreation Kêrsêvazd<sup>4</sup> of those of Vakgir<sup>5</sup>, and many other very evil devastators of the world; he also joined in the destruction of that idol-temple which was on the shore of Lake Kêkast<sup>6</sup>, and demolished that fiendishness which was awful. 40. On account of the desirableness of means for the renovation of the universe, he is also on a throne (namâkô), which is assuredly selected by that destiny, at a secret place where there is an immortal preserver for his body until the renovation, through the will of the creator.

Aûharmazd, and accepted from the omniscient creator Aûharmazd unmixed freedom from pollution, the comprehensive and also recited acquaintance with the knowledge and work of priesthood, warriorship, husbandry, and artisanship, and the separate portions of the Mazda-worshipping revelation (dêñô) brought to king Kâl-Vistâsp by command of the creator, illuminated by the great splendour in that supreme sovereign of the sacred beings, and propagated by the learned of the region, in the regions which are seven, through the good eloquence which is owing to the succession of creatures until the renovation of the universe. 42. And through its production by those who will be his sons, Aûshêdar, Aûshêdar-mâh, and Sôshâns<sup>1</sup>, the renovation in the existence of the creatures of Aûharmazd is immortal; and a more mindful statement of its splendour, glory, and marvellousness is a statement that is written and found below<sup>2</sup>.

43. And there have also been others before Zaratûst, the prophet (vakhshvar) of desired fame in the Mazda-worshipping religion; for it is declared that, at times, some came from the spiritual beings to him who was more of a leader, and mankind have become as captivated by the solicitation and interrogation of that affair, as now by the solicitation and interrogation of the religion; the necessity for that period is not now necessary, because all mankind are made acquainted with the religion, and Zaratûst of the Spîtâmas, whose guardian spirit is righteous, is to be reverenced.

44. Now, that which is declared in the world is written, about the splendour, glory, and marvellousness of the prophet of the Mazda-worshipping religion, the best of creations, whose guardian spirit is reverenced, Zaratûst of the Spîtâmas; and ten chapters are published here, as to the information from the Avesta, and in benediction of the religion of Aûsharmazd<sup>1</sup>.

45. That of it which is before the birth of that glorious one from his mother in the present world.

46. That of it which is from the birth of that illustrious one onwards, till his coming to a conference with Aûsharmazd.

47. That of it which is from the conference onwards, till his pre-eminence over prophecy in the world, and the acceptance of the religion by the exalted Kat-Vistâsp.

48. That of it which is onwards from that, till the departure (vikhëzö) of that pure soul to the existence which is best.

49. That of it which is also successively after that, in the reign of the obedient king Kat-Vistâsp.

50. That of it which is after that, until the collapse (angâvisnö) of the sovereignty of Irân.

51. That of it which is also after that, until the end of the millennium of Zaratûst and the arrival of Aûshêdar.

52. That of it which is also after that, until the end of the millennium of Aûshêdar and the arrival of Aûshêdar-mâh.

53. That of it which is also after that, until the end of the millennium of Aûshêdar-mâh and the arrival of Sôshâns.

54. And that of it from the arrival of the Triumphant Benefiter, until the wonder of the renovation and future existence; a statement of them each separately.

CHAPTER II.

1. About the marvellousness of the manifestations before<sup>1</sup> the birth of that most auspicious of offsprings from his mother<sup>2</sup>.

2. One marvel is this which is declared, that the creator passed on that glory of Zaratûst through the material existences of the creatures<sup>3</sup> to Zaratûst; when the command arose from Aûharmazd, the coming of that glory from the spiritual existence to the worldly, and to the material substance (mâdiyâtö) of Zaratûst, is manifested as a great wonder to the multitude (val kabedânö).

3. Just as revelation mentions it thus: 'Thereupon, when Aûharmazd had produced the material (dahisnö) of Zaratûst, the glory then, in the presence of Aûharmazd, fled on towards the material of Zarâtûst, on to that germ ; from that germ it fled on, on to the light which is endless<sup>1</sup>; from the light which is endless<sup>2</sup> it fled on, on to that of the sun ; from that of the sun it fled on, on to the moon ; from that moon it fled on, on to those stars ; from those stars it fled on, on to the fire which was in the house of Zôis<sup>3</sup> ; and from that fire it fled on, on to the wife of Frâhimrvânâ-zôis<sup>4</sup>, when she brought forth that girl who became the mother of Zarâtûst.'

<sup>2</sup> The contents of this chapter are thus mentioned in the summary of the Spend Nask (Dk. VIII, xiv, 1 in S.B.E., vol. xxxvii, p. 31):—'The Spend contains particulars about the origin and combination of the material existence, guardian spirit, and soul (or glory) of Zaratûst; how the creation of each one occurred in the spiritual existence, and in what mode it was produced for the worldly existence; how their connection with the parents arose, the coming of the parents together, the combination in the mother, and the birth from the mother; and whatever is on the same subject.'

4. Of that splendour, escaped at the same time into the earth and into the sky, the father-in-law's ignorance is declared, so that it is said by those in the village of the more instructed and invoking Zôis<sup>5</sup>, as to the self-combustion which burns the fire, that fuel is not necessary for its use. 5. Then they went on to the governor (kêdö), and he explained to them concerning that same (that is, he spoke to them) thus : ' The full glory of embodied existence

<sup>4</sup> Also written in Pâzand. In Bd. XXXII, 10, it is stated that 'the name of the father of the mother of Zarâtûst was Frahimrvâ' (or Fereâhimrvânâ in the Irâanian version); but very little reliance can be placed on such Pâzand readings of names originally written in Pahlavi.

<sup>5</sup> Here written in Pahlavi letters which can also be read Zandh. In the text, the two preceding adjectives, farhakhtar va-khvân, might be read Farâkht-ruvâ'nân as the beginning of the name. But, as it stands, the text implies that Zôis, the father-in-law of his son Frâhim-rvânâ's wife, was the master of the house, which is the usual oriental arrangement.

is the glory of life apart from the body, so that all diligence devoid of this is only movement.'

6. And it is declared that the demons, on account of their defeat by that glory in maintaining<sup>1</sup> adversity for the girl, were bringing on to that district three armaments (hēnō), winter, the demon of pestilence, and oppressive enemies; and a suspicion was cast by them into the minds of those of the district, that this harm happened to the district owing to the witchcraft of this girl; so that those of the district quarreled dreadfully with the parents, as to the witchcraft of antagonism in the girl, and about putting her out from that district.

7. And the father of that girl spoke even these words to those of the district, with much reason, about the unjust assertion of witchcraft relative to the girl, that is: 'When this girl was brought forth among those of mine, her whole destiny (vakhsh) was afterwards set forth by that manifest radiance of fire, where it brought out radiance from all over her in the dark night. 8. When this girl sits in the interior of the house, wherein there is no fire, and in the chamber (sarāt) of fire they increase its intensity (būrzō), it is lighter there, where and when this girl sits, than there where they increase the intensity of the fire; one is dazzled by the radiance from her body, and that of a wizard would not have been so glorious.'

9. Even then, owing to the influence (sārinisnō) of the demons, and the Kavīg and Karap<sup>2</sup> of the

<sup>2</sup> The Karaps were apparently idolatrous priests, especially those before the conversion of Vistāsp by Zarātūst; one being called 'a wizard' in Chap. III, 5, 42-44, another 'unsanctified' in IV, 24, district, they did not become satisfied; so the father ordered the girl to go to Padīragtarāspō<sup>1</sup>, the father of a family in the country (matâ) of the Spitâmas, in the district (rûdastâk) of Alâk; and the girl obeyed the command of her father. 10. That disturbance which the demons caused, with evil intention, for the expatriation of that girl, the sacred beings assiduously made the reason for the coming of the girl for marriage to Pôrûshâspō, the father of Zarâtûst, through her father sending the girl to the dwelling of Padīragtarâspō, the father of Pôrûshâspō.

11. One marvel<sup>2</sup> is this which is declared, that when that girl, in going to that family, stood on the loftiest place in the country of the Spitâmas, and it is surveyed by her, a great wonder is manifested to the girl, just as revelation mentions: ‘It is their<sup>3</sup>

a third is ‘deadly’ in IV, 67, and a demon himself is a Karap in IV, 61, and has Karaps under his control in II, 45. The following Karaps are named in the time of Zarâtûst:—Dûrâsrôbô mentioned in Chap. III, 4–41; Brâdrôk-rêsh in III, 20–34, who is called a Tûrânian in III, 28; Vaêdvôist in IV, 21–24; and Zâk in IV, 67. Some others are named by other writers. The Kavîgs, Kais, or Kîgs are mentioned with the Karaps in Chaps. II, 9; III, 50; IV, 2, 6, 14, 64, 67; VIII, 26, 40, as equally objectionable, but their avocation as officials is not defined. Both classes seem to have held official rank, but whether their titles were tribal or official is uncertain. The Avesta calls them Karapan and Kavi; the latter word being also the royal title of the Kayân dynasty, of which Vîrtâsp was a member. Compare Zs. XV, 1–4; XXIII, 8.

<sup>1</sup> So also in §§ 13, 70. In Bd. XXXII, 1, 2, the two old MSS. of the Irâanian Bundahis have Padtarâsp thrice and Pîrtarâsp once; K 20 has Spitarâsp and Paitiresp; K 20 b has Padirtarâspô and Paitirispô; and M6 has Padirtarâsp and Paitiresp. Zs. XIII, 6, has Purtarâspô.

<sup>3</sup> Probably we should read: ‘It is the voice of those sacred beings’ who are mentioned in § 10. As the word yasdân, ‘sacred beings,’ is exactly similar, in Pahlavi, to shân (in valâshân, ‘their’) voice is carried away to her from them ; "do thou proceed to that village which is theirs; it is very depressed in height and very wide in breadth, in which he who is living and the cattle mostly walk together; besides, for thy assistance that village is divinely fashioned and compassionate." 12. Thereupon that damsel stopped, and also fully observed that their recital seems to be for the conveyance of this statement, that my action should be such as was ordered me by my father also. 13. Then that damsel thoroughly washed her hands, and proceeded from them to that village which was Padīragtarāspō's, and the glory came to Pôrûshâspô, the son of Padīragtarâspô.

14. One marvel is this which is declared, that the creator Aûharmazd passed on the guardian spirit (fravâhar) of Zaratûst, to the parents of Zaratûst, through (le-kadân) Hôm<sup>1</sup>, by a marvel produced by cultivation. 15. Again, too, revelation says that, when the separation (burinô) of the third millennium occurred, at the end of the 3,000 years of spiritual existence without a destroyer, (after the creatures were in spiritual existence, and before the arrival of the fiend); then the archangels framed Zaratûst together, and they seated the guardian spirit within, having a mouth, having a tongue, and the proclaimer of the celestial mansions.

or 'those'), a copyist would be liable to the blunder of leaving out the final word in writing valâshân yasdân. Or the original writer himself may not have quoted enough of the text he was reading, to make his meaning clear.

<sup>1</sup> A sacred and mythical tree, described in Bd. XVIII, 1-3, and often personified as a sacred being. It is now represented, in Parsi ceremonies, by twigs of a particular plant brought from Persia.

16. Then the three millenniums of Zaratûst<sup>1</sup> were the number manifest to them through observation by the eye, and it seemed that he became just like an archangel through bodily contact with (ham-kerpîh)<sup>2</sup> the archangels. 17. And when the separation of the third millennium occurred, after the framing of Zaratûst together, and before the conveying of Zaratûst down to the worldly state, at the end of the 3,000 years of worldly existence with a destroyer, then Aûharmazd argued with Vohûmanô and Ashavahistô<sup>3</sup> thus : ' Is his mother beheld by you, so that we may produce Zaratûst ? '

18. And Ashavahistô spoke in reply thus : ' Thou art aware even of that, O propitious one ! about the Zaratûst we shall produce, and thou and we have produced, thou knowest, O Aûharmazd ! and to us who are the other archangels do thou announce the place, because its appearance thou knowest, thou propitious spirit Aûharmazd ! '

19. Then Aûharmazd argued with Vohûmanô and the reminding by Ardvahistô<sup>4</sup>, Shatraver, Spendarmad, Khûrdad, and Amûrdad<sup>5</sup>, saying :

<sup>1</sup> Meaning the period of Zaratûst's existence merely as a guardian spirit, the first period of the destroyer (§ 17) who then remained powerless in confusion (see Bd. I, 22).

<sup>3</sup> The personifications of the Avesta phrases for 'good thought' and 'perfect rectitude,' who are two of the seven that hold a superior position among sacred beings, somewhat similar to that of archangels. When a Parsi speaks of Aûharmazd as the first of the Amesaspends, or archangels, he does not put him on an equality with the rest, any more than we put a commander-in-chief on an equality with his troops when we call him a good soldier.

'The conveying of Zaratûst down does not seem to be for me, because, having a mouth and having a tongue, he will be a proclaimer to the world of embodied beings. 20. If we convey Zaratûst down on to the world of embodied beings, having a mouth and having a tongue, as a proclaimer of the celestial mansion, this is evident: they will say, concerning the origin of him who is my righteous man, that we frame him together with the water, with the land, with the plants, and with the animals<sup>1</sup>. 21. Therefore we will carry off there, to the village of Pôrûshâspô, him whom they will call Zaratûst of good lineage of both natures, both of Nêryôsang<sup>2</sup> who is of the archangels, and of Yim who is of mankind.'

22. Then the archangels framed together a stem of Hôm the height of a man, excellent in colour, and juicy where fresh; also to carry off the guardian spirit of Zaratûst to that stem of theirs, the archangels made it go forth thither from that endless light, and gave it up there also to the instinctive intellect (âsnô vir). 23. Likewise their carrying off was manifest around, and a wall was openly displayed round them, but a restless one; the Hôm was constantly provided with a mouth, where it was suitable, and sap constantly oozed from the Hôm where it was moist.

phrases for 'desirable dominion, bountiful devotion, completeness or health, and immortality.'

<sup>3</sup> The MS. has 330 years, but the time intended is evidently that shortly before the birth of Zaratûst, and this third 3,000 years-well-disturbed<sup>1</sup> worldly existence remained, Vohūmanō and Ashavahistō then associated their pre-eminence together, and turned off into the embodied existence; there they came up to where two birds had settled in quest of progeny, and seven years before the serpents devoured the inexperienced progeny. 25. For their own designs, Vohūmanō and Ashavahistō went on, and those birds consulted them thus: 'We have to offer homage, and our want is that Hōm.'

26. The circumstances of those associated together in pre-eminence and the request of these for that Hōm were a double marvel; Vohūmanō seized one of those birds by both legs, and the other by one; he also brought them that Hōm, and gave it up to them there, on that tree within their nest. 27. And they uncovered above the serpents, that have gone up to the progeny of the birds; then that guardian spirit of Zaratūst started up, and the serpents on the tree rushed also from them away towards the demons; but that guardian spirit of Zaratūst smote them on the jaws, and the serpents fell down and expired, which events have also occurred among them till now, having been requisite as regards a depriver of life (gān-gir) and any one of that species. 28. And that Hōm was connected with that tree; and on the summit of that tree, there ended either when Vistāspō accepted the religion, in Zaratūst's forty-second year, or when Zaratūst received the religion in his thirtieth year, but this earlier date is the more likely.

where the nest of the birds was, it grew constantly fresh and golden-coloured<sup>1</sup>.

29. After the coming of her who bore Zarātūst, to Pōrūshāspō for marriage, Vohūmanō and Ardvahistō, thus associated together in their pre-eminence, came up there to Pōrūshāspō in the cattle-pasture of the Spītāmas, and their thoughts were confined to that Hōm brought by them. 30. Then Pōrūshāspō walked forth, with spiritual desire, up to the water of the Dāft<sup>2</sup>, because the requirement of the spirits is the spiritual knowledge<sup>3</sup> that spirits are ever-beneficial; and that Hōm was also seen by him, when it had grown on that tree, on the inside of the nest. 31. Then Pōrūshāspō thought thus: 'It is for me, really (madam-īk-am) to proceed and, even as there is no reaching by me up to that Hōm, that tree must be cut down, for apart from that, O Hōm of Aūhāzmasd! thou seemest fresh, so that the benefit of something from thee will be advantageous.'

32. Then Pōrūshāspō walked on and washed their clothes acquiescently (patāsig), and here a great wonder was manifest to Pōrūshāspō. 33. About this it says that, all the while that Pōrūshāspō washed their clothes, Vohūmanō then proceeded from the uppermost third of the tree unto the middle of it, whereon it was the desire of Pōrū-shâspô to be conveyed. 34. Then Pôrûshâspô, having washed the clothes, walked up to it and, thereupon gathering up the whole of that Hôm, all of it was then also appropriated by him through assistance like that of that archangel, just as what thou offerest for the food-sustenance of a friend's son of two years or three years of age; and it seemed to him that archangel's joyful payment.

35. Carrying off their Hôm, Pôrûshâspô spoke of it to his noble (mas) wife thus: 'So thou, O Dûk-dâub! shouldest keep their Hôm in custody, all the while that their Hôm fulfils duty and routine.'

36. One marvel is this which is declared, that the coming of the nature (gôhar) of the body of Zarâtûst, through water and vegetation, to the bodies of his parents, is manifested as a great wonder of the creator to the multitude. 37. As revelation mentions it thus: 'Thereupon, when Aûharmazd had produced the material (dahisnö) of Zarâtûst<sup>1</sup>, the nature of his body then, in the presence of Aûharmazd, fled on towards the material of Zarâtûst.'

38. About Khûrdad and Mûrdad<sup>2</sup>, bringing the cloud-water down in a compassionate manner ever anew, drop by drop, and completely warm, for the delight of sheep and men, and—with as much seed as the roving of two rampant bulls would thereby cast upon the plants which have grown, all of every species—they are casting it upon those other plants at that time, even upon the dry ones; and the nature of Zarātūst came from that water to those plants.

<sup>2</sup> These two archangels have special charge of water and vegetation (see Sls. XV, 25-29), and here they are represented as acting in a manner usually ascribed to Tistar, the Dog-star.

39. One marvel is this which is declared, that, in order that the nature of Zarātūst shall come unto his parents, after<sup>1</sup> the mounting of the archangels Pōrūshāspō drives six white cows, with yellow ears, up to those plants. 40. And here is manifested a great wonder, such as revelation mentions thus: Two<sup>2</sup> of those cows, unimpregnated, had become full of milk, and the nature of Zarātūst came from the plants to those cows, and is mingled with the cows' milk; it is owing thereto that Pōrūshāspō drove those cows back. 41. And Pōrūshāspō spoke to Dūkdāub thus: 'O Dūkdāub! in two of those cows, which are unimpregnated and have not calved, milk has appeared; do thou milk those cows, which are the splendour and glory of the cows and of any embodied existence whatever.' 42. And Dūkdāub arose and, taking that pail of hers which had a four-fold capacity, she also milked from them the milk which was in them, and a great part of what they gave up to her she had to throw away; and the nature of Zarātūst was in that milk.

43. One marvel is this which is manifested in the struggle of the adversary for concealing and spoiling that milk, just as revelation mentions thus: Thereupon, at that time, the demons formed themselves into an assembly, and the demon of demons growled thus: 'You demons become quite unobservant: that food is really supplied fresh, so that the formation is settled which will extend as far as to that man who will be the righteous Zarātūst; which of you will undertake his destruction, all the while that he exists for mankind, so as to make him more contemptibly impotent?' 44. Kēshmak<sup>1</sup>, astute in evil, growled thus: 'I will undertake his destruction.' 45. Astute in evil, he rushed away with thrice fifty of the demons who are Karaps of Kēshmak; and that village was partly uprooted and partly destroyed<sup>2</sup> by him, fellow-workers were ruined, and the number of fellow-eaters of broken victuals, attending the great, was not broken up, among whom was he that had repelled his authority.

46. It is declared that, afterwards, Pōrūshāspō asked again for that Hōm from Dūkdāub, and he pounded it, and with that cows' milk<sup>3</sup>, into which the nature of the body of Zarātūst had come, he here mingled the guardian spirit of Zarātūst, and the nature of the body came at once into union with it.

47. One marvel is this which is declared, that Pōrūshāspō and Dūkdāub drank up that Hōm and milk, when they were mingled together and announced to Aūharmazd; and here occurred a combination of the glory, guardian spirit, and bodily nature of Zarātūst into a manchild. 48. And a great wonder is manifested to both of them, through that which revelation mentions thus: Thereupon, both have embraced the first time<sup>4</sup> with desire for a son, and the demons shouted out unto them, in the villainous speech of sinfulness, thus: 'Why shouldst thou act like this, vile<sup>1</sup> Pôrûshâspô?' whereupon they started up like people who are ashamed. 49. A second time they have embraced, and the demons shouted out unto them, in villainous speech; whereupon they started up like people who are ashamed. 50. A third time they have embraced thus, with desire for a son; and the demons shouted out unto them, in villainous speech; whereupon they started up like people who are ashamed. 51. And they spoke with one another about it, and continued at this duty, and accomplished it<sup>2</sup>, saying: 'We will not so stop without accomplishing something, not even though both Râk and Nôdar should arrive here together<sup>3</sup>'. 52. Then that manchild who was the righteous Zaratûst became complete, and "here below there came together the nature of the body, the guardian spirit, and the glory of Zaratûst in the womb of his mother.

53. One marvel is this which is declared, that, after the combination of Zaratûst in the womb of his mother, the demons strove anew wonderfully to cause the death of Zaratûst in his mother's womb, and she who bore him was rendered sickly by them through the sharpest of sharp and afflictive pain, until she wished to ask the wizard physicians for a desirable remedy. 54. And here is manifested a great wonder, just as revelation says: ‘It is then a voice of theirs is carried away there to her from the higher region, from Aþharmazd and from the archangels, thus: “Thou damsel who goest! do not proceed thither, because anything of theirs is destruction through wizard medical treatment; for healthfulness wash thy hands thoroughly, and those hands shall take firewood, and upon it thou shalt offer meat for the sake of the infant, thou shalt offer up cows' butter to the fire for his sake; thou shalt likewise heat it at the fire for his sake, and shalt quaff (pâimâs) it off at the proper time for his sake, and thou wilt become well.”’ 55. Then at once that damsel washed her hands thoroughly, and she did just as she had heard, and became well<sup>1</sup>.

56. One marvel is this which is manifested to the multitude when three days remained to his coming<sup>2</sup> forth; in the manner of the sun, at the approach of its uprising, when its first advancing twilight is diffused, his body is then announced as revelation says: ‘It is then when in those last three nights during which Zaratûst was in the womb, where he still subsisted three days till afterwards born, that the village of Pôrûshâspô became all luminous. 57. Then spoke the horse-owners and cattle-owners of the Spîtamas, in running away, thus: “It is requisite to be forgiven<sup>3</sup>; the village of Pôrûshâspô, on which that fire<sup>1</sup> is in every crevice, is disturbed by confusion<sup>2</sup>." 58. Then, on running together again, they said : " It is not fully forgiven for the village of Pôrûshâspô ; fire is on it in every crevice and it is disturbed by confusion ; unto him is born, at his house, a brilliant manchild."

59. This, too, is one of the wonders, when the report of the marvellousness of the birth of that manchild and of his great glory, is due to statements of Yim and also others, brilliant in carrying on the destiny which had entered them from the sacred beings. 60. Wherein Yim spoke to the demons thus : ' Here below the pure and righteous Zaratûst will be born, who will produce for you who are demons that absence of intercession which is prepared for you (that is, he will produce for you a thoroughly-harassed actual inactivity, an absence of intercession so that you are not able to pray on your own account, and no one prays for you).'

61. It is declared that the report about the birth of Zaratûst, and concerning his prophesying, is explained (avazandî-hastô) only by the illustrious, such as Yim and Frêdûn and many learned people ; but the sacred beings are also heard through the tongues of the animals scattered in the world, in order that even that witness shall arise as regards his prophesying. 62. Just like that which is declared, that in the reign of Kâi-Ùs there was an ox, and a splendour had come to his body from the sacred beings ; and whenever a dispute as to the frontier arose between Irân and Tûrân, that ox was brought, and the boundary between Irân and Tûrân was truly shown by him. 63. And because, when an Irâanian had to seek a decision as to a Tûrânian in a dispute and lies occurred, the Tûrânians were constantly convicted through the showing of the boundary by the ox, and happened to be defeated by the Irânians—and, besides that, their envy also arose as to Kai-Ùs, even of his ownership—therefore, on account of his possession of that wonder, the Tûrânians proceeded about the smiting and destruction of that ox, and through their sorcery and witchcraft the mind of Kai-Ùs was disturbed about that ox, and he went to a warrior, whose name was Sritô<sup>1</sup>, and ordered him to kill that ox; so that man came to smite the ox. 64. And here is manifested a wonder of importance by that ox, such as revelation mentions thus: ‘To him spoke the ox, in grave words, thus: “Thou shouldest not murder me, O Sritô! thou seventh<sup>2</sup> of those of this race; you will atone for this malice when Zaratûst, the most desirous of righteousness among the existences, arrives and proclaims thy bad action in revelation; and the distress in thy soul becomes such as is declared by that passage where it says: ‘As death occurs to him, that of Vadak<sup>3</sup> and the like occurs.’”’ 65. It is declared that that man, when this wonder was thus seen by him proceeding from the ox, did not kill it, but went back to Kai-Ùs and told him what he had seen. 66. Kai-Ùs then still, on account of the amazing deceitfulness of the demons and wizards, ordered the same man to smite that ox;

and that man proceeded also again to the ox, and though it was carrying on still much of that talk, he did not lend an ear to it, but killed it.

67. Regarding the sole-created ox<sup>1</sup>, too, it is declared that, on meeting its destruction by the evil spirit, it bellowed thus: 'Though thou thinkest it as to us, O evil spirit, astute in evil! that thou art in every way a winner by destruction, it is not to our destruction thou art even then an attainer in every way (that is, it is not possible for thee so to annihilate that we shall not arise again); even now I proclaim that that man, Zaratûst of the Spîtâmas, will arrive in that last revolution, who will produce distress for the demons, the assistants of the demon, and also the wicked who are bipeds.'

68. Likewise the marvellousness of Zaratûst's defeat of the demons, owing to his glory and by means of his sagacity, even before he had come into the world by birth; when Frâstyâv<sup>2</sup> the wizard is amazingly distressed through seeking that glory of his by desire of the demons, just as revelation<sup>3</sup> mentions thus: 'Thereupon Frâstyâv, the very powerful Tûrânian, rushed away, O Zaratûst of the Spîtâmas! to the wide-formed ocean a first, a second, and a third time; and he wished to obtain that glory which is specially for those of the countries of Irân, for the born and the unborn, and which is for the righteous one; but he did not attain to that glory.'

69. And this, too, is mentioned, that to all the seven regions the villain Frangrásiyák rushed away, and the glory of Zarattúst was sought by him<sup>1</sup>.

CHAPTER III.

1. About the marvellousness which is manifested after the birth of that most auspicious of offsprings from his mother, till his coming to a conference with Atharmazd<sup>1</sup>.

2. One marvel is this which is declared, that on being born he laughed outright; the seven midwives (dayah)<sup>2</sup>, who sat around him, were quite frightened thereby; and those terrified ones spoke thus: 'What was this, on account of grandeur or contempt? when, like the worthy man whose pleasure is due to activity, the man's child so laughs at the birth owing to him.' 3. Pôrûshâspô also spoke thus: 'Bring out this manchild to the sheepskin clothing which is soft; the affair was owing to thee, owing to the virtue of thee who art Dûkdâub, that the advent of glory and coming of radiance to this manchild was openly seen when he laughed outright at his birth.'

4. One marvel is this which is declared, that Pôrûshâspô afterwards went to a Karap, Dûrasrôbô by name, who was the most renowned for witchcraft in that district, and informed him of the birth of Zarâtûst and the wonders which were manifested therein ; he also brought him to the house for the purpose of seeing Zaratûst. 5. That wizard, owing to the coming on of vexation at that glory in Zaratûst, desired with evil intention a really mischievous deceit (shêdö), to compress with his paws (gôv) the tender head of that full-glorious child, to cause his death. 6. And here is manifested a great wonder to the multitude, just as revelation mentions it thus : ' Thereupon the paws of that deadly one (mar) are driven back to behind him (that is, reversed (aûskûn) backwards) ; nor ever after did that deadly one become again a devourer of meat with his jaws by means of those paws.' 7. That Karap also, besides that, examined the marks and evil specks on Zaratûst<sup>1</sup> ; and Pôrûshâspô, in awful alarm as to the dispersion of the emanation of splendour (âp-dihth) from Zaratûst, hastened (sârinid) to make Zaratûst invisible.

8. One marvel is this which is declared, that the Karap Dûrâsrôbô, through witchcraft, cast such fear of Zaratûst into the mind of Pôrûshâspô, and so injured the mind of Pôrûshâspô, that, owing only to that very fear as regards himself, he asked the Karap for the death of Zaratûst. 9. Also about<sup>2</sup> the mode of putting to death for which Pôrûshâspô, owing to the distraction (vishôpisnö) by which he becomes helpless, asks Dûrâsrôbô ; and that Karap is bringing much firewood together, and to shelter (nipâ-yidânö) Zaratûst amid that firewood, to stir up a fire, and to make it blaze with the wood were the remedy he arranged (vîrâstö) ; and Pôrûshâspô acted accordingly. 10. And here is manifested a great wonder to the multitude, just as revelation mentions it thus : 'Neither was fire among the vegetation on a tree (that is, it does not come on), nor has fire seized upon plants ; but on rushed, at dawn<sup>1</sup>, that son-loving mother, and she came forth to him intelligently (hūshūmōnd), and seizing him, thereby removed him with her right hand aloft as he sat<sup>2</sup>'.

11. One marvel is this which is declared, that after Pōrūshāspō spoke to the Karap Dūrasrōbō about the fire not burning the child, he asked anew about putting Zarātūst to death ; then to ensconce (nipāyīdanō) Zarātūst in a narrow path, and despatch many oxen on that path, so that he may be trampled on by the feet of the oxen at night, were the remedy that Karap proposed (girāyīdō) to Pōrūshāspō ; and Pōrūshāspō acted accordingly. 12. Here also is manifested a wonder of grandeur to the multitude, just as revelation mentions : 'It was that ox walked on which had become sorrowful (that is, its sorrow was great owing to another ox) and it was aged and walked before that one (before the leading ox), it also hastened before that other (that is, it stood up before Zarātūst), and he was greatly pitied by it for the whole day, so that it kept away the oxen from him, being the first that walked thither and the last that walked away ; on rushed at dawn that son-loving mother, forth to him she came intelligently, and seizing him, thereby removed him with her right hand aloft as he sat<sup>1</sup>.

13. One marvel is this which is declared, that Pôrûshâspô came a second time (îdanö) to that Karap also about the oxen not trampling on Zarâtûst, and asked anew about the mode of putting Zarâtûst to death; then to ensconce Zarâtûst near a drinking-pool (âvkhûr) in the domain (gêhân), and to drive many horses to that drinking-pool, so that he may be trampled on by the hoofs of the horses, were the substituted<sup>2</sup> remedy that Karap proposed; and Pôrûshâspô acted accordingly. 14. And here is manifested a great wonder to the multitude, just as revelation mentions thus: 'That horse walked on which had become fully-hoofed (that is, its hoofs were very thick); it is yellow-eared and it walks before that one (before the leading horse), and it hastens before that other (that is, it stood up before Zarâtûst), and was the first that walked on thither, and the last that walked away; on rushed at dawn that son-loving mother, forth to him she came intelligently, and seizing him, thereby removed him with her right hand aloft as he sat<sup>3</sup>'.

15. One marvel is this which is declared, that Pôrûshâspô came again to that Karap, spoke also about the horses, too, not trampling on Zarâtûst, and asked anew as to what may be the mode of putting

<sup>2</sup> Possibly 'supplementary' or 'gratuitous.' The word is nîrmatô which, as a noun, means the gratuity or honorarium paid to a priest for acting as a substitute for another. Its etymology is obscure, unless it be an abbreviation of nîrîmandi, 'strength,' used in the legal sense of 'refresher.'

Zaratûst to death ; then to have Zaratûst carried off into the den (sûrâk) where a wolf's cubs (hûnûskân) are slaughtered, so that when the wolf arrives and sees the slaughtered cubs, she will wrathfully growl and mangle Zaratûst in revenge for those cubs, was the remedy that Karap proposed ; and Pôrûshâspô acted accordingly. 16. And here is manifested a great wonder to the multitude, just as revelation mentions : 'It is when that wolf came on, several Yûgyâsts<sup>1</sup>, towards Zaratûst, the wolf was struck dumb by the assistance of the sacred beings, so that its mouth was down at the cubs, one with the other.'

17. One marvel is this which is declared, that Srôsh<sup>2</sup> the righteous and Vohûmanô proceeded to him, and a woolly (kûrûsak) sheep was brought by them unto him ; the nurses (dâyagân)<sup>3</sup> also were terrified, apart from him, the whole night. 18. Then on rushed at dawn that son-loving mother, forwards from the position of that woolly sheep she walked, and she, the mistress of the domain (zan-i gehân), spoke thus : 'Thou runnest on violently (utayûtô) in excess ;' for she considered in this way, that 'the wolf is so much better to that son than thou art<sup>4</sup> good to me, when I shall show his<sup>5</sup> bone or blood in thy sight<sup>6</sup>.' 19. Forwards to him has she come

<sup>1</sup> The Yûgyâst is a distance of sixteen Roman miles of a thousand paces each (see Dk. VIII, xx, 19, note). But the writer of the scripture here quoted could have had no idea of the distance he was mentioning.

<sup>2</sup> A sacred being who personifies 'obedience,' and is a special protector of man, particularly at night.

intelligently and, seizing him, she thereby removed him, through the grace (dahisnð) of the sacred beings, aloft as he sat; and she, the mistress of the domain, spoke thus: 'I shall not give thee up again, my son, not even though both Râk and Nôdar should arrive here together<sup>1</sup>'.

20. And it is declared that, afterwards, the Karap Dûrâsrôbô, with a malicious disciple, came to the same district and noticed about the advancement of Zaratûst; and they saw no means for injuring or putting him to death, but his condition (mindavam) was a marvel as full of vigour as this which is declared, that Brâdrôk-rêsh, the Karap, growled thus:

—21. 'Then I, who am the most far-seeing of the people in that district of ours as to witchcraft, see upon their district that well-directing (that is, he understands good commands) produce of development (that is, the increase which continually becomes more, which has come and which will arrive), with good flocks (that is, he understands to keep good sheep), with good herds (that is, he understands to keep a herd which is better than another's), the well-exerting (that is, he understands to do work which is better than another's), well-fighting (that is, he understands to do battle well), and perfectly liberal (that is, he understands to exercise beneficial liberality) bantling (hûnûskð) of Pôrushâspô<sup>2</sup>, in the three nights while he was begotten out of his parents. 22. Unto him will Vohûmanô come in the embodied world (that is, Vohûmanô will come unto Zarâst), and conducting him unto a conference, his good religion will extend into the seven regions of the earth; and so I shall not even let him produce in his mind (that is, he will not know) where and how I shall murder him; and a token of this matter, that one speaks truly, is this, that I state it beforehand, promptly after the full hearing of the statement of the matter, when you heard this statement.'

23. Pôrûshâspô advanced, conveyed in a four-in-hand chariot<sup>1</sup>; then, on hearing that statement, and when they had heard that statement, Pôrûshâspô started forth, conveyed in that four-in-hand chariot. 24. And Pôrûshâspô spoke to Brâdrôk-rêsh, the Karap, thus: 'Brâdrôk-rêsh, thou Karap! whatever men they shall behold, cry out when at birth; even the offspring of that secluded person they behold in death, cry out when at birth<sup>2</sup>; but what was that which they beheld at the birth of my son? 25. When at birth he laughed outright; was that also beheld in thy son, when at birth did he laugh outright? 26. When Vohûmanô comes unto him, into this embodied existence, it is also said by him on his return: "O Pôrûshâspô! where is thy servant<sup>3</sup>?" So, O Karap! concerning him who is my son, it is beheld that he was seen sagaciously by thee.'

For restoring the original Avesta, the Pahlavi translation, without the glosses, is usually the best guide.

27. And <sup>1</sup> when Pôrûshâspô enquired of him thus : ' What was the matter with thee when, through bringing thee unto that son of mine, he was thereby offered ; and thou lookedst long up away from him in height, and thou lookedst long down away from him in depth, and thou lookedst long out away from him in different directions ? ' 28. The Tûrânian, Brâdrôk-rêsh the Karap, spoke in reply thus : ' When through bringing me unto that son was thy offering of him, and I <sup>2</sup> looked long up away from him in height, then the radiance and glory out of him kept together up to the sun, and through him <sup>3</sup> I have accompanied them on the boundary of its radiance and glory ; so that I saw this, that mankind through speaking to the soul may attain to the firmament of the sun ; but this, namely, how the routine (dâdistânô) is in the supreme heaven, was not seen by me. 29. When through bringing me unto that son of thine was thy offering of him, and I looked long down in depth away from thy offering of him, then the radiance and glory out of him kept together unto the sky which is below this earth, and through him <sup>4</sup> to the boundary of its radiance and glory ; but this, namely, how the routine is in that sky, was not seen by me. 30. And when through bringing me unto that son of thine was thy offering of him, and I looked long out away from him in different directions, then the radiance and glory from him kept together for adorning this earth, and through him I have accompanied them on the boundary of its radiance and glory ; so that I saw this, that only from the action of this one the future existence will arise ; but the routine of the future existence was not seen by me. 31. This son of thine thinks thus : “ I will make a grander material existence than that of any other ; ” so he will also make thy spiritual one, where thou goest ; and this son of thine will remain in the great protection of Vistâsp, not in thine.’

32. One marvel is this which is declared, that when Zaratûst was seven years old, that Dûrâsrôbô being joined by Brâdrôk-rêsh the Karap at the village of Pôrûshâspô, on account of the little previous seeing of Zaratûst by the latter, they saw Zaratûst in that neighbourhood when a hut (kâdakô) was constructed by him with the children ; and they sat with evil intention to injure the mind of Zaratûst through witchcraft, and for that reason fear and terror were cast by them upon the children. 33. Here a great wonder became manifest to them, owing to the powerful intellect, cautiousness, and practice of Zaratûst, just as revelation mentions thus : ‘ When the other children were excessively terrified at their own silliness of speech, Zaratûst did not quite close the eye in his mind as regards them.’

34. One marvel is this which is declared, that when these two Karaps came to the dwelling of Pôrûshâspô, he ordered the preparation of food for their eating ; and his prepared food is chewed up (frâz khayâf-att), with a gobletful (pûr dôlakô) of mare’s milk. 35. He also spoke to Dûrâsrôbô thus : ‘ Thou art the most spirit-worshipping<sup>1</sup> of mankind in our district; do thou worship this of mine.' 36. A great marvel, owing to the sagacity of Zarātūst at a childish age, is just as revelation mentions that Zarātūst spoke thus: 'I worship this, O father! it is not that which it is necessary for me to worship that he should worship.' 37. And Pōrūshāspō spoke thus: 'It is not that of mine thou worshipeſt, and it is that of mine he should worship.' 38. As many as three times those persons (gabráān) carried on those assertions; when up stood Zarātūst and spoke concerning them, and he broke forth with that eternal statement<sup>1</sup>, namely: 'The righteous I reverence, men or women; the poor I reverence, men or women; not the wicked, men or women; when any one whatever shall join Pōrūshāspō, where he shall be celebrating worship, the worship shall then be suitable to the worshippers, that is, he shall worship that which it is necessary to worship.'

39. One marvel is this which is declared; that afterwards Dūrāsrōbō the Karap shouted to Zarātūst thus: 'Evil was thy reckoning<sup>2</sup> which, owing to the conduct of fate (bāhar), I, the foremost of the existences embodied in Rāk and Nōdār<sup>3</sup>, bring to thee; I am made further worthy where thy fate is carried away from me; now is the joy (parkān) which I convey to him<sup>4</sup> through bringing it on, and this intended, but rather some form of worship antecedent to Zoroastrian Mazda-worship which latter had not yet been established. The author of this legend must have supposed that it differed very little from the religion of Pōrūshāspō.

will occur, so that I may observe he will kill thee with the evil eye in the house.' 40. And here is a great wonder which became manifest about Zaratûst, in the sagacity of his reply to that deadly one at that childish age, which was just like this which revelation mentions, that Zaratûst spoke thus : 'Without the joy of a murderer I observe, with propitiousness and complete mindfulness, that it is thee I notice in that house which is thine<sup>1</sup>.'

41. One marvel is that which, after this reply of Zaratûst to Dûrâsrôbô, became manifest in that Karap, just as revelation mentions thus : 'The deadly one became disabled and stupefied as long as the milking of ten mares in milk whose milker is only one.'

42. One marvel is this which is declared, that when that wizard emerged from that stupefaction, he then shouted again to Zaratûst in the same manner, Zaratûst uttered that same reply, and the deadly one became anew disabled and stupefied as long as the milking of twenty mares full of milk whose milker is only one.

43. One marvel is this which is declared, that again when that wizard emerged from that stupefaction, he then shouted to Zaratûst in the same manner, Zaratûst uttered that same reply, and the deadly one becomes anew disabled and stupefied as long as the milking of thirty mares full of milk whose milker is only one.

44. One marvel is this which is declared, that when that wizard emerged from that stupefaction, he ing to most accounts, was the murderer of Zaratûst in his old age. This tradition is mentioned in Dk. VII only here and in § 22.

then grumbled thus : ' Do ye have the horse driven for us, and turn round the chariot wherein you harness it ; for really this smiting one (gânâk) will destroy me through the arrival of the sacred text and through his possession of authority.' So they had the horse driven, and it was harnessed to the chariot by them.

45. And here is manifested a great wonder to the multitude, just as revelation mentions thus : ' When he had proceeded several Yûgyâsts<sup>1</sup> in driving, he stopped in his distress through being terrified, and this occurred which I mention for a warning<sup>2</sup>, his semen was expelled, so that it arose in his skin and burst it<sup>3</sup>, and his loin thereby broke from his thigh ; he then died outright, then his progeny, and then the offspring of his progeny.'

46. One marvel is this which is declared that, even before the coming of Zarathûst to a conference<sup>4</sup>, there is manifested in him a mind which is more capacious than the whole world, and more exalted than every worldly possession, with an understanding whose strength is perfectly selected, an intellect of all-acquiring power, and a sagacity of all-deciding ability ; also with the much heedfulness of the kingly glory, and the full desire for righteousness, the efficacious diligence and authority, and even the superiority in mightiness and grandeur of the priestly glory.

47. Also the handsomeness of body and completeness of strength which are in the character of these four classes of his, which are priesthood, warriorship, husbandry, and artisanship; besides a perfect friendship for the sacred beings and the good, and an awful enmity for the demons and the vile. 48. That is the nature by which the habits (dādōth) of mankind and bipeds, the perfection and completeness of the sacred beings through the creativeness of Aūharmazd, and its own commemoration of them are provided. 49. So that the sacred beings shall bring a report, as to his superiority, from every one of those who are and were and will be, and of his coming for reminding us of Aūharmazd and of the lord-and-mastership (a hū-va-radīh) of the world, also of the preservation of the creations therein (ayēpō-dahisnān), from the destroyer, by the tongue of the many-mannered (ka bed-sarādakō) sage, the fully-virtuous one of the age producing no harm (avazand-dahig) in the world. 50. And the demons on this account, that this is he whom many Kigs<sup>1</sup> and Karaps have to influence the good to confound and destroy, then also kept their promise and practised friendship.

51. And on the completion of thirty years beyond his birth<sup>2</sup>, the archangel Vohūmanō came on in commemoration of Aūharmazd, when he was bringing his Hōm-water (mayā-t Hōmīgān)<sup>3</sup> from the

<sup>2</sup> The remaining contents of this and the following chapter are thus summarized in Dk. VIII, xiv, 3, 4:—‘His attainment on maturity, at thirty years of age, to a conference with Aūharmazd; and the occurrence of seven conferences in ten years. Many marvels, owing to him are published therein, just as there are some which, collected and selected, are noticed by the Dinkard manuscript,’ that is, in this seventh book, in which, however, the details of the seven conferences do not occur; but some are mentioned in Zs. river Aēvatāk<sup>1</sup>, just as this which revelation mentions thus: 'When Zaratūst came forth to the third effluent (barā-tagisnh), that of the good Dāttī, he further proceeded through that; and when he marched onwards from that, a man was seen by him, who marched from the southern quarter. 52. That was Vohūmanō, and it seemed to him that Vohūmanō was of early form (so that he is more discerning as to a person) and foreseeing (that is, he was beforehand in everything); it seemed to him that Vohūmanō was as much in height as three men's spears; and it seemed to him, as to Vohūmanō that a glossy twig (arūs tāk) was brought by him in his hand, through carrying off which branch the plant was not injured by him; that became the spiritual twig of the religion, and this was indicated by it, that it is necessary to proceed as uninjurious by the religion.

53. There is some one who says that it became a reminder of the spiritual existence, and this was indicated by it, that it is necessary to proceed as uninjurious in the world, so that peace may exist with every one.

54. When he came onward to the fourth effluent, as far as the Aushān-rūd of the good Dāttī (which was the name of it) and he was in it, Zaratūst was bringing the Hōm-water from the middle of it; and on the ascent Zaratūst, bringing his right foot out of the Aushān-rūd, covered himself with his clothes, and upon that Vohūmanō, advancing, joined him in front.

<sup>1</sup> Literally 'single-flowing.' In Bd. XXIX, 4, 5, it is Nāftāk which has been translated as 'navigable' in Bd. XX, 34, and as 'flowing in a channel' in Dk. VIII, xxxvii, 38, 42; IX, xvi, 16.— From § 54 it appears to have been a channel of the good Dāttī river which flows from Afrān-vēg (see Bd. XX, 13).

55. And that man enquired of him thus: 'Who art thou; from whom of them art thou<sup>1</sup>?' He replied: 'I am Zarātūst<sup>2</sup> of the Spītāmas.'

56. The words of Vohūmanō were: 'O Zarātūst of the Spītāmas! about what is thy foremost distress (that is, for what is thy need when thou becomest quite distressed); about what is thy foremost endeavour; and for what is the tendency of thy desire (lak kāmakō-dahisñih)?' 57. The reply of Zarātūst was thus: 'About righteousness, I consider my foremost distress; about righteousness my foremost endeavour; and for righteousness the tendency of my desire (that is, my need is for that thing, and I am a distressed seeker of righteousness).'

58. The words of Vohūmanō were: 'O Zarātūst of the Spītāmas! that which is righteousness is existing (that is, a real thing is, as it were, that which is righteousness), so that whatever is that which is righteousness is thus what is one's own.' 59. And Zarātūst spoke thus: 'That which is righteousness exists, and concerning that I am completely clear and aware; but where and how is that radiance which is that whose arrival is through Vohūmanō?'

60. And Vohūmanō spoke to him thus: 'O Zarātūst of the Spītāmas! deposit this one garment which thou carriest, so that we may confer with him by whom thou art produced and by whom I am produced, who is the most propitious of spirits, who is the most beneficent of existences, and who is he that I, who am Vohūmanō, am testifying (that is, I am a reminder of him).'

61. Thereupon, Zaratūst thought thus: 'Good is he who is the creator, who is better than this reminder.' 62. Then they proceeded in company, Vohūmanō and Zaratūst; Vohūmanō first and Zaratūst after.

CHAPTER IV.

1. About the marvellousness which is manifested from the first conference onwards till the end of the seventh conference which occurred within the duration of ten years, also his pre-eminence in prophecy in the world, and the acceptance of the religion by the exalted Kāt-Vistāsp, as happened after the ten years of conference.

2. In the first two years, one marvel is this which is declared, that when he was back from the first conference, he then, by the first command of the lord and creator Aūharmazd, recited the unique formula (āyinō) in an assemblage (ram) of Kīgs and Karaps, the prophecy of his Mazda-worshipping religion and commemoration of Aūharmazd, as he chanted with a loud voice, and invited mankind to the religion of Aūharmazd. 3. Just as this passage of revelation mentions thus: 'Thereupon, the thorough inspection for this material existence of those with a sacred girdle, provided with dwellings and provided with cattle, was altogether arranged by Zaratūst.'

4. And when their announcement (nivēdisnō) for speaking to be heard was issued<sup>1</sup>, then Zaratûst, on becoming exalted, called out unto the embodied world of righteousness to extol righteousness and to scorn the demons<sup>2</sup>. 5. ‘The homage of the Mazdaworship of Zaratûst, and the ceremonial and obeisance for the archangels are the best for you I assert; and of deprecation (ayazisnih) for the demons next-of-kin marriage is really the best intimation, so that, from the information which is given as to the trustworthiness of a good work, the greatest are the most intimate of them, those of father and daughter, son and she who bore him, and brother and sister.’

6. It is declared that, upon those words, innumerable demon-worshipping Kigs and Karaps have rushed upon Zaratûst and strove for his death, just like this which revelation states:—‘It is then a number (mar) have run away who have sat in the vicinity of Tûr’s progeny (hûnûskô)<sup>3</sup>; the arbitrator; and the shame of the brother of Tûr arose, like that of a person whose shame was that they spoke of his next-of-kin marriage so that he might contract it.’

7. This Tûr was Aûrvâltâ-dang<sup>4</sup> the Tûr, the scanty giver, who was like a great sovereign of that

<sup>3</sup> An opprobrious term for the progeny of evil beings and animals, also used by a Karap when speaking of Zaratûst in Chap. III, 21.

<sup>4</sup> As this name has not been found in the extant Avesta, its correct reading is uncertain. In Zs. XX, 8, it can be read Aûrvâltö-dih, in which dih is the Pahl. translation of Av. dang.hu, of which dang is a Pahl. transliteration; and the whole name may mean ‘friendly to the province,’ which seems suitable to this particular ruler. The MS. appears to have dêng.

quarter; many troops and much power were also maintained by him, and the multitude (mar) told him they would seize the great one from him who is little.

8. But the progeny of Aûrvâitâ-dang the Tûr, the scanty giver, spoke thus: 'Should we for that speech destroy him, this great one who mingles together those propitious words for us—where we are thus without doubt as to one thing therein, such as next-of-kin marriage, that it is not necessary to contract it—it would make us ever doubtful whether it might be necessary to contract it.'

9. And Aûrvâitâ-dang the Tûr, the scanty giver, spoke thus: 'Thou shalt not destroy that man whom mine eyes have-seen as the most loving-eyed of the whole embodied existence; he will attain strength, for it has not seemed to me, when thou destroyest him on this account, that wisdom has arisen for a long time; so that no rule (âhankô) of wisdom will arise, in this earth, which is so counselling (hangamanig) as this one is (that is, when they destroy a man who is counselling, wisdom will not arise for a long while).'

10. Aûrvâitâ-dang the Tûr, the scanty giver to his own people, also spoke thus: 'For me thou art a pure man who is counselling.'

11. And Zaratûst spoke thus: 'I shall not always be that quiet speaker, by<sup>1</sup> whom that I have mentioned is the most propitious thing to be obtained; and of interfering<sup>2</sup> speaking and managing the temper there is a next-of-kin marriage, and the high-priest who has contracted<sup>1</sup> it is to perform the ceremonial.'

12. And here the good spiritual lordship and mightiness of glory of Zaratûst, those which are provided for commemoration of the supreme lord and creator Aûharmazd, are manifested as a great wonder to the multitude, and there is rendered visible the great pre-eminence which is in him as a prophet of the creatures, which for the baseness (nankîh) of the deceitful Agash,<sup>2</sup> the secret-moving and deceiving-natured, is the concealed control of a good disposition. 13. Then idleness, like even the habit of fear and nature of apostasy, is an attractor of every one of the multitude, when it extends to much length; little by little, too, that guide and combatant becomes a petitioner for greatness, and it is manifest through that compassion (tang-libbemâth) and superior mindfulness of his, and through the glory of that stout champion, there are much fame and treasure.

14. The nobles of Aûrvâitâ-dang the Tûr, the ruler of the land, were angry and clamourers for Zaratûst's death; but he invited the Kigs and Karaps to the religion of Aûharmazd, just as this passage of revelation states that Zaratûst also spoke thus: 'Worldly righteousness, O Aûrvâitâ-dang, thou Tûr and scanty giver! is the whole of the worship of the demons and the termination of the Mazda-worship of Zaratûst.' 15. And Aûrvâitâ-dang the Tûr, the scanty giver, spoke thus: 'O Zaratûst of the Spitâmas! thou shalt not attract me to this evil in which thou really art.'

16. Zaratûst also spoke thus: 'Aûharmazd enquired of me thus: "O Zaratûst! when thou hast come away to us, among the spiritual lords, who of the people in thy material existence was the protector of the powerful men who are warriors, that was most seeking benefit, most seeking cattle, most extensively associating, most fully-supplying (that is, he gives out most things), and most hospitable<sup>1</sup> (that is, one saw the door of a prince's (khidîvô) treasury)?" I replied to him thus: "Aûrvâitâ-dang the Tûr, the scanty giver."

17. And he spoke in reply to me thus: "Him, O Zaratûst! thou shalt attract, first of the men who are warriors, to thinking about, speaking about, and acting about this religion which is Aûharmazd's and Zaratûst's. 18. If you attract him, O Zaratûst! and he believes in it and also gives currency to this religion of thine, and sits before thee in discipleship, this that one calls discipleship of thine he shall undertake, and the religion he hears fully he shall propagate (rûbâk vâ bîdûnyêñ); he is also ever after, O Zaratûst! the first of the men who are warriors, the one most seeking benefit, most seeking cattle, most extensively associating, and most hospitable of those who have yet been born and who will henceforth be born. 19. And if you do not attract him, O Zaratûst! and he does not believe in it, nor gives currency to this religion of thine, nor hears it, nor even sits before thee, nor would sit before thee, so that it is obvious to me that he is not attracted, thou shalt speak unto him thus, O Zaratûst: 'Thou art a stricken suppliant for righteousness, and a producer of lamentation for the souls of Tanâpûhar sinners worthy of death;’ for even so it is, and for this reason he becomes worthy of death, because the existence of the religion is known to him.” 20. What I tell thee, O Aûrvâitâ-dang, thou Tûr and scanty giver! is that thou art a stricken suppliant for righteousness, a producer of lamentation for the souls of Tanâpûhar sinners worthy of death.’

21. One prodigy of the demons is specified, who was the enemy of whatever sacred beings there are, a Karap, Vaêdvôist<sup>1</sup> by name, of those unsanctified (ayastân) by Aûharmazd<sup>2</sup>. 22. And Aûharmazd spoke thus: ‘I so befriend that man, O Zaratûst! who is put forward by me over the creatures, whom thou shalt invite (khvânêš), I who am Aûharmazd, because I am through righteousness opposed to harm (that is, through virtue I keep harm away from the creatures), and the archangels are opposed to harm. 23. Therefore do thou proceed, O Zaratûst! and thou shalt demand from him for me (that is, keep as my property) a hundred youths of vigour (têsh-tal)<sup>3</sup>, girls, and teams of four horses; so do thou speak to him thus: “O Vêdvoist! Aûharmazd demands from thee a hundred youths of vigour, girls, and teams of four horses; if thou givest them to him, splendour and glory are thine through that giving ; and if thou dost not give to him, evil destiny is thine through that not-giving."

<sup>3</sup> For an instance of gifts of slaves see the Pahlavi inscription on an engraved stone from Baghdâd, in Indian Antiquary, vol. xi, p. 224, ll. 2, 3 of inscription: ‘kevan bîdûn va-kanigakö . . . lakhvâr . . . shedrûnam . . . va-zak shibâ rîdö va-shibâ kanigaköân shedrûnt:’—‘Now . . . I send back a slave-boy and slave-girl . . . and those seven slave-boys and seven slave-girls are sent.’ This inscription was probably engraved in the seventh century, judging from the forms of the letters.

24. Then Zaratûst walked on to that Vêdvoist of those unsanctified, and spoke to him thus : ' O Vêdvoist of the unsanctified ! that which Aûharmazd demands from thee is a hundred youths of vigour, girls, and teams of four horses ; if thou givest them to him, splendour and glory are thine through that giving ; and if thou dost not give to him, evil destiny is thine through that not-giving.' 25. And that Karap shouted in reply to Zaratûst thus : ' For me there is no more from thee (that is, there is no opulence for me from thy action), nor from Aûharmazd ; I am more of a divinity (bagtar) and am more forward in opulence than even Aûharmazd ; many droves of a thousand swine are also acquired by me.'

26. On went Zaratûst, up to Aûharmazd and up to the archangels, and Zaratûst spoke thus : ' O Aûharmazd, propitious spirit, creator of the world of embodied beings, thou righteous one ! thus spoke he in reply to me : " For me there is no more from thee, nor from Aûharmazd ; I am more of a divinity than thee or even Aûharmazd, and many droves of a thousand swine are acquired by me."

27. And Aûharmazd spoke thus : ' Owing to the splendour and glory of those which are ours, O Zaratûst ! that man has acquired arrogance (that is, the cattle we produced are the many cattle of his arrogance). 28. This will be his retribution for it then, however, when he does not reach further alive at the end of the third night<sup>1</sup> ; in that third night they will have stood aloof from alongside his life (that is, they will have stood away from assisting it); those seven of them who are radiant and bright-eyed (spēdō dōtsar) make him rush up on high, and up there on high he shall be fed upon mouldy bread (parnān).'

29. One marvel is the great healthfulness owing to the Hōm-water and the bringing of this by Zaratūst from the river Dāti, which is manifested when Vohūmanō was conveying him to the conference.

30. Just as is declared in the words of Aūharmazd to Zaratūst thus: 'For them is the Hōm-water which thou bringest, O Zaratūst! not for those demon-worshipping people who worship the demons, or for a satisfier of courtezans (gēh-vigār); they shall sprinkle it on to that bull thou shalt bring forward, who is a four-year-old of exhausted vigour, black-haired and useful; on drinking up the water, that bull will become quite sound from that infirmity.'

31. Thereupon, Zaratūst went on first into the embodied existence, on which dwelt, at the end of Sagāstān<sup>1</sup>, that same Parshad whose title was Tōrā (the Bull). 32. Parshad-tōrā<sup>2</sup> also spoke to him which the soul is supposed to have its destination determined, until the resurrection (see Hād̄kht Nask, II, 18; III, 17). If the seven sacred beings who stand aloof from him be the archangels, they treat Vēdvoist very leniently; but this legend treats of a period which it assumes to be earlier than the laws of Zaratūst.

<sup>2</sup> Av. Parshad-gau, mentioned twice in Yt. XIII, 96, 127, but it is not certain that both allusions refer to the same individual. The name also occurs in Bd. XXIX, 5, but only in one old MS.; in all others another name is given, though the locality appears to be thus : 'O Zaratûst of the Spîtâmas ! give me this Hôm-water which thou bringest.' 33. And Zaratûst spoke thus : ' Do thou praise righteousness, O Parshad-tôrâ ! and scorn the demons ; also utter the profession<sup>1</sup> of the Maæda-worship of Zaratûst among the iniquitous.' 34. It was praised by Parshad-tôrâ, and the demons were scorned by him ; yet he did not speak among the iniquitous as to his accepting the Maæda-worship of Zaratûst. 35. Forward to him came Zaratûst at that praise of righteousness, for him was that Hôm-water which Zaratûst brought ; not for those demon-worshipping people who have worshipped the demons, but for that bull of his which Zaratûst brought forward, a four-year-old of exhausted vigour, black-haired and useful ; owing to that bringing forward of the water, the bull became quite sound from that infirmity.

36. One marvel is that which is declared regarding the rushing of the evil spirit for the slaughter of Zaratûst, just as revelation<sup>2</sup> mentions thus : ' From the northern quarter forth rushed the deadly evil spirit, and thus shouted he, astute in evil, the deadly evil spirit : " Rush on, O fiend ! and destroy the righteous Zaratûst." ' 37. On to him they rushed, the fiend, the demon Bûd, and secret-moving Pestilence, the deceiver. 38. Zaratûst chanted aloud the Ahunavair ; the fiend was confounded at that, and away they rushed, the demon Bûd and secret-moving Pestilence, the deceiver. 39. And the fiends shouted thus : " Thou art scornfully observing, O evil spirit ! (that is, anything to the purpose thou nearly the same. In § 31 the first part of the name is here written Parshad.

dost not thoroughly observe, and what thou orderest us to do is not possible); the death of him who is Zarātūst of the Spītāmas is not contemplated by us."

40. Owing to the full glory of the righteous Zarātūst, he perceived in his mind thus: "The wicked demons, astute in evil, consult together about my death;" and up stood Zarātūst, forth went Zarātūst.

41. Here is manifested a great wonder to the multitude, in that which is mentioned thus: 'And a stone was put forth by the righteous Zarātūst, that was held in his hand, and the size of a hut, and which was obtained by him from the creator Aūharmazd, the spiritual Yathā-ahū-vairyō<sup>1</sup>.'

42. And one marvel is this which is manifested not only in the country of Irān to Irānians, but in every land and to every race: the shattering of the demons' bodies through the chanting of the Ahunavair aloud by Zarātūst. 43. Just as that which a passage<sup>2</sup> mentions thus: 'I worship the resources of the Kayān glory, with which the righteous Zarātūst was associated in thinking about, speaking about, and acting about the religion which was, of all embodied existences, the most righteous in righteousness, the most lordly in sovereignty, the most radiant in radiance, and the most glorious in glory. 44. At his appearance<sup>3</sup> the demons have fallen before him, at his appearance their semen (māyagān) also drops, at his appearance the courtezan is also withdrawn by them from mankind; on hearing<sup>1</sup> him they lamented, very violently is it lamented by the demons. 45. By the Allunavair, which the righteous Zaratûst chanted aloud to them, all the demons are seized and buried in the earth, where the complete shattering of their bodies is manifest.' 46. So that, after the shattering of their bodies, it became evident to those in the world that they were not able to do mischief in the bodily form of a demon, and they have been declared of the nature of sacred beings to mankind, but mankind fully understood that they are not sacred beings, but demons.

47. Zaratûst revealed (gushûftô) to mankind by the word of Aûharmazd, how in this religion the latter tells in words to Zaratûst where and how, in the embodied existence, mankind consider a demon as exalted or as a high-priest, because they are where they say that they must consider some one as high-priest 48. So Aûharmazd spoke to Zaratûst thus: 'How do they who are good people, O Zaratûst! consider a demon as exalted? and how are they that even tell a demon thus: "We should accept you," because the demons speak thus: "It will happen to you" ?'

49. And Zaratûst spoke thus: 'Only for the reason, O Aûharmazd! that people hasten on to that which is a jungly plain without dwellings, where no one resides from the departure of light until sunrise arrives, when it is two Hâsars<sup>1</sup> of night, and again silently (agôp) from sunset until their returning together when the two Hâsars of night are gone, they hear that no work, no men, and no voices of dogs are there. 50. Then they say as to that, on arriving back, thus: "We have consulted with the demons there; when we request (zâêm) monarchy (sâstârîh) and leadership from them, they give them to us; when we request the possession of flocks and opulence from them, they give them to us."

<sup>1</sup> If the word be Pahlavi, it is probably intended for snâyân, 'hearing'; but it may be merely an approximate transcript of Av. snaodhentis, which word, if this be the case, must have puzzled Sasanian scholars as much as it does those of the present time. As a transcript, the word might be read snôdfyân, and we might guess the meaning of the phrase to be 'thereupon weeping they lamented.'

51. Then Aûharmazd spoke thus: 'How can they do such a thing for them, O Zaratûst! (that is, how does it happen that it is continually given by them for those that speak thus: "It happened to us") ?'

52. And Zaratûst spoke thus: 'They speak variously, O Aûharmazd! as to that generosity; there is one who speaks thus: "I have ever after been possessing more flocks, so long as I am in consultation with the demons;" and there is another who speaks thus: "I have ever after been worse and more ill-fated, so long as we are in consultation with those demons;" according as they possess a full subsistence for themselves from the demons (that is, when they diversely subsist fully on whatever they bespeak from the demons).'
 53. Zaratûst also spoke thus: 'So they speak about it, O Aûharmazd! thus: "Observe further, where any one of us returns he is either shrunk together (that is, he holds his head down to his chest), or shrunk away (that is, he looks quite aside), or is only pleasantly cast down and, owing to acquiescence in him, the demons tempt (nes,hünd) him away out of mankind."

54. And Aūharmazd spoke thus: 'According to thy wish, do thou, O Zarātūst! fully observe thy existence, upwards from the head, downwards from the sole<sup>1</sup> of the foot, and afar on various sides; and thou shouldst beseech before and behind and in every direction, for we are not as to thee as the demons are as to mankind, we give away everything only in invisibility; but the demons, through close connection, when they rush out, tempt only with pleasantness. 55. Even unto thee, O Zarātūst! a fiend will rush, a female, golden-bodied and full-bosomed (so that she wears a bodice), and she rushes to request companionship from thee; a female, golden-bodied and full-bosomed, to request conversation from thee, to request co-operation from thee. 56. But thou shouldst not grant her companionship, nor conversation, nor shalt thou prescribe any conduct for her; afterwards, to revert her downwards, thou shalt utter aloud that triumphant saying the Yathā-ahū-vairyō.'

57. Zarātūst proceeded to the habitable and friendly world, for the purpose of fully observing that beaten track (kh&pisnō) of the embodied existence; then that fiend came forward when he sat in the vicinity of a garment—that garment<sup>2</sup> which, when Vohūmanō was conveying him to the conference, was deposited by him—a female, golden-bodied and full-bosomed, and companionship, conversation, and co-operation were requested by her from him; she also whined (dandidö): 'I am Spendarmad<sup>1</sup>.'

58. And Zaratûst spoke thus: 'She who is Spendarmad was fully observed by me in the light of a cloudless day, and that Spendarmad appeared to me fine behind and fine before and fine all round (that is, in all positions she was handsome); do thou turn thy back, and I shall know if thou art Spendarmad.'

59. And the fiend spoke to him thus: 'O Zaratûst of the Spîtâmas! where we are, those who are females are handsome in front, but frightfully hideous behind; so do not make a demand for my back.' 60. After she had protested a third time, the fiend turned her back, and she was seen by Zaratûst behind in the groin; and when matter was exuded, it was full of serpents, toads, lizards, centipedes, and frogs.

61. And that triumphant saying, the Yathâ-ahû-vairyö, was uttered aloud by Zaratûst; then that fiend was annihilated, and Kêshmak<sup>2</sup>, the Karap rushed forth. 62. And he grumbled in leaving, thus: 'The misery which is here below is such as I have obtained, because, owing to thee, I thought that thy sacred beings were more joyful than any heroes who through defeat go to hell; I proceed more joyfully than the sacred beings, as regards the life in the body, so that I fully deceive the life in thy body, and thou art fully deceived by me as regards thine.'

63. Zāratūst also revealed (gushūftō) this secret to mankind, and their knowledge how to test a demon is manifested therein, even by a great wonder of the same nature to mankind: the visible rushing of the demons into the world before Zāratūst, and their bodies being afterwards shattered by the loud chanting of revelation by Zāratūst from the Avesta announced, which was the acceptance of its truth by the ruler Vistāsp and the people of that time; and if this had not been so, and Vistāsp and those of his time were not accepting the Avesta which was announced by Zāratūst in this fashion, through their considering it false, it would not have reached unto us.

64. One marvel is this, with which, too, he who was Zāratūst became aware from revelation, about the vileness and perverted religion of Zāk of the deadly Karaps of Vistāsp and many other Kāts and Karaps who were at the residence of Vistāsp, their combination for the death of Zāratūst, the preparation for severe abuse of him to Vistāsp, and influencing Vistāsp for his death by command of Vistāsp, which extends to awful imprisonment and punishment. 65. Afterwards, too, his knowledge about his preservation therefrom, the manifestation of his wondrousness, and the evidence concerning his attainment unto prophesying; also after the continuance of the last questioning of the ten years of conference, his departure alone, by the advice and command of Aūharmazd, to the residence of Vistāsp and the precinct (var) of that terrible conflict. 66. His uttering, on the horse-course (aspānvar) of Vistāsp, a reminder of the power and triumph of Aūharmazd over himself, as he invited Vistāsp to the religion of Aūharmazd ; and with great wisdom Vistāsp heard the words of Zaratūst, on account of his own complete mindfulness and spiritual knowledge of ritual, and would have asked for an outpouring of prophecy.

67. But thereupon, too—before the words of Zaratūst were fully heard by him, and he could have understood the character of Zaratūst—owing to the demonizing of the deadly Zāk and the rest of those Kīgs and Karaps, spoken out with slanderous knowledge and perverse actions to Vistāsp about Zaratūst, there then occurred his consignment of Zaratūst to that confinement and punishment as stated in the words of Zaratūst thus : 'I have spoken about their three enquiries, and I am bound by thirty of them, I with thirty-three fetters of murderers, wicked ones, and demon-worshippers<sup>1</sup>. 68. But the hunger of manhood's inclination<sup>2</sup> violently affected the strength of my legs, but the hunger of manhood's inclination violently affected the force of my arms, but the hunger of manhood's inclination violently affected the hearing of my ears, but the hunger of manhood's inclination violently affected the sight of my eyes, and it would force away my bosom up to my back (so that it<sup>3</sup> would stay behind at my back) through the continuance of that deadly hunger of manhood's inclination.'

69. And here, through the mightiness of Zaratūst—who proceeded alone to the terrible combat with evil, where there became manifest, in the mode which is written, the descent of his life into so much punishment, due to hunger and thirst, heavy fetters, and other misery unto which the strength of human nature is attaining, but unto which it is not destined—is manifested a great wonder to king Vistâsp and his officials, when his full-glorious person was found by them alive in awfulness, imprisonment, and those other transformations (padgastakîh) of long-continued starvation.

<sup>3</sup> The bosom. The idea of the writer appears to have been that in case of utter starvation the chest would totally collapse, so that the breast bone would touch the spine.

70. One marvel is this, that the sacred beings contrived, for the sake of (va / vahân-i) his preservation from that awfulness, a body possessing life, and on his account it became lifeless and imperceptible; afterwards, in the great session of Vistâsp and the assembly of the world, Zaratûst, through the strength and blessedness of the true word, restored the same body anew, like that which is issuing in the statement of the wonder about the splendid horse of Vistâsp<sup>1</sup>.

71. One marvel is his telling and disclosing the thoughts of king Vistâsp and of those of the realm, and many other concealed matters, through spiritual perception.

72. One marvel is several matters of evil deceit (va'd gamâs) which Dahâk had done in Bâpel<sup>2</sup> through witchcraft, and mankind had come to idol-worship through that seduction, and its increase was the destruction of the world; but through the triumphant words of the religion, which Zaratûst proclaimed opposing it, that witchcraft is all dissipated and disabled.

<sup>1</sup> This very slight allusion to the cure of Vistâsp's horse by Zaratûst is sufficient to show that this legend existed in the ninth century; but the writer of the Dinkard seems inclined to trace it back to a tale that he vaguely relates in the earlier part of this section, and which he evidently found in older writings; this tale, however, does not mention a horse, but only an animated body. The Persian Zaratûst-nâma develops the legend of the sick horse, whose legs are drawn up to its belly, into 160 couplets.

73. One marvel is this which is manifested, with wonders owing to Zaratûst, in controversy about the religion with the famous learned of the realm, among whom, known for learning in the world, are the investigators (girâyagânô) of the words of speech; and among those things which are more surprisingly controversial are those later (sibastar) words which are to save their creatures by a later religion. 74. Also to proclaim its truth intelligibly, and to make king Vistâsp and those previously learned men without doubt as to the truth of the religion, the creator Aûharmazd sends some spirits, Vohûmanô, Ashavahistô, and the propitious fire<sup>1</sup>, as a reminder to Vistâsp about the true prophesying of Zaratûst, and the desire of Aûharmazd for the acceptance of the religion of Mazda-worship by Vistâsp and for its propagation in the world.

75. The wondrousness which is manifested to Vistâsp and those of the realm—both through the travelling (vâzidânô) of those archangels down from the sky to the earth, and in their travelling to the abode of Vistâsp—was like this which revelation mentions thus: ‘Then he who is the creator Aûharmazd spoke to them, to Vohûmanô, Ashavahistô, and also the fire of Aûharmazd, the propitious, thus: “Proceed! you who are archangels, unto the abode of Vistāsp, whose resources (afzâr) are cattle and who is far and widely famed, with a view to his reliance upon this religion (that is, till he shall stand up for this religion); and, as regards the answering words of the righteous Zarātûst of the Spîtâmas, to approve the nature (zag sân) of those words." 76. The archangels proceeded unto the abode of Vistāsp, whose resources are cattle and who is far and widely famed; their radiance, in that lofty residence, seemed to him, that Vistāsp, a heaven of complete light, owing to their great power and triumph; this was so that, when he thus looked upon it, the exalted Kat-Vistāsp trembled, all his courtiers (pêsakö) trembled, all his chieftains (paðö) were confused, and he of the superior class: was like the driver of a chariot-horse.

77. 'And the fire of Aûharmazd spoke, in the words of heroes, thus: "Fear not, for there is no fearing for thee, thou exalted Kat-Vistāsp! they have not come for alarming thy abode, as a reminder of the deputed envoys of Argâsp<sup>1</sup>; there have not come, for alarming thy abode, the two Khyôns of

<sup>1</sup> Av. Aregad-aspa, king of the Huyaonas (Pahl. Khyôns), mentioned in Yt. V, 109, 113, 116; XVII, 50; XIX, 87. His war with Vistāsp, for the purpose of compelling the latter to abjure his new religion, is described in the Yâdkâr-i Zarfrân. (see Geiger in Sitzungsberichten der p.-p. und h. Classe der k. bayer. Akad. der Wiss. 1890, Bd. II, pp. 43-84). Argâsp sends two envoys, Vîdraf the wizard and Nâmkhvâst of the Hazârs, to demand Vistâsp's submission; this is refused defiantly by advice of Zarîr, the king's brother; and both nations prepare for war. When the Irânians meet the Khyôns, Vistâsp consults his vazîr Gâmâsp, who prognosticates prodigious slaughter. And, after losing most of their chieftains (including twenty-three brothers and sons of Vistâsp), the Irânians utterly annihilate the Khyôn army. This war is called the 'war of the religion' in Bd. XII, 33; Byt. III, 9.

Argasp who demand tribute and revenue (sâk vabâzö); and there has not come, for alarming thy abode, the all-overpowering thief who is an injurer, or the dog who is a highwayman. 78. We are three who have come over (taristö) to thy abode, Vohû-manö, Ashavahistö, and also the fire of the propitious lord; of these thy knowledge is most wisely most just. 79. If thou helpest vision, so that it becomes wisdom for thee, the worldly existence requires the good religion of the Mazda-worshippers, which proceeds purely through the recitation which Zaratûst of the Spîtâmas teaches. 80. Do thou chant the Ahunavair, do thou praise perfect righteousness<sup>1</sup>, and utter no worship<sup>2</sup> for the demons! because the desire of Aûharmazd, as regards thee, is for thy reliance upon this religion; it is also the desire of the archangels, and the desire, as regards thee, of the other sacred beings who are beneficent (sapîr-dahakö) and righteous.

81. "And as the recompense in this life, if you praise the good and pure religion of the righteous Zaratûst of the Spîtâmas, we will give unto thee a long reign and sovereignty, and the long lifetime of a life of 150 years; we will give unto thee Good Integrity and Rectitude<sup>3</sup> which is long-continued in desire for constantly assisting, good for assistance through constantly assisting, and not passing away; and we will give unto thee a son, Pêshyôtan<sup>1</sup> is his name, he is immortal, and so is undecaying, hungerless, and thirstless, living and predominant in both existences, those of the embodied beings and of the spirits. 82. But, as the recompense in this life, if you do not praise the good and pure religion of the righteous Zarâtûst of the Spitâmas, we will not convey thee up on high, and we will order thine end; the vultures which are mindful of decay will see and eat up those and these of thine, thy blood will reach the ground, and the waters will not reach thy body.”

83. One marvel is that connected with the confidence (vâvari-hastanö) of Vistâsp in the religion, even through that occurrence of the speech of the archangels; and, afterwards, the obedience (patyâsâi?) of his thoughts in the case of the delays through the bloodshed owing to Argâsp<sup>2</sup> the Khyôn and his attendant heroes (pas-gurdânö) throughout the same Khyôns, because of the acceptance of the religion. 84. Also, for the sake of daily and visibly showing to Vistâsp the certified victory over Argâsp and the Khyôns, and his own superior position, unceasing rule, splendour, and glory, the creator Aûharmazd sends, at the same time, the angel Nêryôsang<sup>3</sup> to the abode of Vistâsp, as a reminder for the archangel Ashavahistô to give to Vistâsp to drink of that fountain of life, for looking into the existence of the spirits, the enlightening food by means of which great glory and beauty are seen by Vistâsp.

85. Just as this passage of revelation mentions thus : ‘And he who is the creator Aûharmazd spoke to the angel Nêryôsang thus : “ Proceed and travel, O Nêryôsang the assembler<sup>1</sup> unto the abode of Vistâsp, whose resources are cattle and who is far and widely famed, and thou shalt say this to Ashavahistô, thus : ‘O Ashavahistô ! do thou authoritatively take this fine saucer (tastô), which is fully finer than the other saucers that are made (that is, the cup (gâm) is as fine as is possible to make for royalty), and carry up to Vistâsp the Hôm and Vars<sup>2</sup> (mûî) which are for us ; and do thou give it<sup>3</sup> unto the ruler Vistâsp to drink up, by whose word it is accepted.’” 86. Ashavahistô authoritatively taking the fine saucer from him, also, thereupon, gave it unto the exalted ruler Kai-Vistâsp to drink from<sup>4</sup>; and the ruler of the country (dîh), the exalted Kai-Vistâsp, lay down when divested of his robes, and he spoke to Hûtôs<sup>5</sup> thus : “ You, O Hûtôs ! are she whom the prompt ability (tēzō hūnār) of Zaratûst of the Spîtâmas should reach; and through the diligence of the prompt ability of Zaratûst of the Spîtâmas, you<sup>1</sup> would expound the religion of Aâharmazd and Zaratûst.<sup>2</sup>

87. One marvel is this which is declared, that when Vistâsp, accepting the religion, praises righteousness, the demons in hell are disabled, and the demon Aeshm<sup>3</sup> rushes to the country of the Khyôns and to Argâsp, the deadly one of the Khyôns, because he was the mightiest of the tyrants at that time; and the most hideous of all, of so many of them in the country of the Khyôns, are poured out by him for war.

88. And here, too, is manifested a great wonder also to the host (ram) of Irân who have been coming there, unto the residence of Argâsp the Khyôn, like this which revelation mentions thus: 'Then, just at the time his legion is separately displayed, Aeshm the unredeemable (ta nāpūharak) adheres (gērē-rēdō) to him, as being himself without escort (agurōh), and quite opposes (barâ sperezēdō) him, because: "You, who are a Khyôn, have become unlucky through want of success after you engage in conflict."<sup>4</sup> 89. Henceforth, it is not that the victory of Irân has come over foreigners and Khyôns—through companionship at the abode of that man who is mightier by the birth of Zaratûst of the Spitâmas—when that hideous sovereignty of Argâsp, the deadly Khyôñ, is swallowed up by him (Vistâsp), for the confusion of the deadly species (that is, they are further smitten by him, one through the other; and are swallowed together by him, mutually struggling and through mutually devouring). 90. And apart from him, that bitter and well-hardened Khyôñ that is quite disabled by him the good Vistâsp, that deadly fiend is disturbed about him of eloquent abilities (Zaratûst); and so he grumbled at the hideous sovereignty thus: ‘ Prompt ability comes into existence and the Khyôñ came; thereupon prompt ability comes into existence and the Irânian has come<sup>1</sup>.’

CHAPTER V.

1. About the marvellousness which is manifested from the acceptance of the religion by Vistâsp onwards till the departure (vîkhêzö) of Zaratûst, whose guardian spirit is reverenced, to the best existence, when seventy-seven years<sup>2</sup> had elapsed onwards from his birth, forty-seven onwards from his conference, and thirty-five years onwards from the acceptance of the religion by Vistâsp<sup>1</sup>.

<sup>1</sup> According to the numbering of the folios of the old MS. of 1659 (brought from Persia to India in 1783) one folio, numbered 313 in Persian words, is here missing. It has not yet been found in India, and, owing to folio 312 apparently completing a sentence, and folio 314 evidently beginning a new chapter, the loss of text is hardly perceptible. It would have filled the next two pages.

<sup>2</sup> The MS. has ‘57 years,’ through ‘50’ being written instead of ‘46’ ‘70’; but see Chap. III, 51 which states the interval of thirty years between his birth and conference.

2. One marvel is this which is declared that, when Zaratûst chanted revelation in the abode of Vistâsp, it was manifest to the eye that it is danced to with joyfulness, both by the cattle and beasts of burden, and by the spirit of the fires which are in the abode. 3. By which, too, a great wonder is proclaimed, like this which revelation mentions thus: 'There seemed a righteous joyfulness of all the cattle, beasts of burden, and fires of the place, and there seemed a powerfulness of every kind of well-prepared spirits and of those quitting the abode (mân-hishânö), "that will make us<sup>2</sup> henceforth powerful through religion," when they fully heard those words which were spoken by the righteous Zaratûst of the Spitâmas.'

4. And one marvel is the provision, by Zaratûst, of the achievement of ordeal, that indicator of the acquitted and incriminated for sentence by the judge, in obscure legal proceedings; of which it is said in revelation there are about (kîgûn) thirty-three kinds.

5. These, too, the disciples of Zaratûst kept in use, after that time, until the collapse of the monarchy of Irân; and the custom of one of them is that of pouring melted metal on the breast, as in the achievement of the saintly (hû-fravardö) Âtûrpâd son of Mâraspend, through whose preservation a knowledge about the religion was diffused in the world ; and of the manifestation, too, through that great wonder, this is also said, on the same subject, in the good religion, that of those many, when they behold that rite of ordeal, it convinces the wicked ones<sup>1</sup>.

<sup>1</sup> The contents of this chapter and the next, as far as VI, 11, may be connected with the following summary in Dk. VIII, xiv, 9:—'Information also as to many other things which are marvellous, and as to a summary of the statements of these seven enquiries, which is derived from knowledge of every kind.' For the seven enquiries, see Zs. XXII.

6. One marvel is that which is afterwards manifested, after the former captivity of Zaratûst<sup>2</sup> and his speaking about the religion to Vistâsp and those of the realm<sup>3</sup>, such as the acceptance of the religion by Vistâsp and that which Zaratûst said to him at his original arrival, as regards the declaration of a ruler's religion, thus : 'Thine is this disposition, and this religion which is calling (khrôsakö) is a property of that description which thou puttest together, O Kat-Vistâsp ! so that if thou wilt accept this disposition of thine, thou wilt possess this religion which exists (that is, the learning of learnings), and be the ruler that shall cause its progress ; thou wilt possess in this disposition of thine, as it were, a new support (stûnakö), and any one will uphold thee by upholding it, as thou art the possessor of the support of this religion.' 7. Also the victory of Vistâsp over Argasp the Khyôn and other foreigners in that awful battle<sup>4</sup>, just as Zaratûst explained unto Vistâsp in revelation ; and much which is declared by revelation.

8. One marvel is the disclosure by Zaratûst, in complete beneficence, medical knowledge, acquaintance with character, and other professional retentiveness (pishakö-gîrûkh), secretly and completely, of what is necessary for legal knowledge and spiritual perception; also the indication, by revelation, of the rites for driving out pestilence (sēgō), overpowering the demon and witch, and disabling sorcery and witchcraft. 9. The curing of disease, the counteraction of wolves and noxious creatures, the liberating of rain, and the confining of hail, spiders, locusts, and other terrors of corn and plants and adversaries of animals, by the marvellous rites which are also relating to the worship of Khūrdad and Amūrdad<sup>1</sup>, and many other rites which were kept in use until the collapse of the monarchy of Irān; and there are some which have remained even till now<sup>2</sup>, and are manifested with a trifle of marvellousness by the sacred fires. 10. And the disclosure to mankind of many running waters from marvellous streams (ardāyā), and remedies for sickness which are mixed (fargārdakō) by well-considering physicians; many are spiritual and celestial, gaseous (vāyīg) and earthy; and the worldly advantage of others, too, is the praise (lāfō) which ought to come to one for angelic<sup>3</sup> wisdom.

11. One is the marvel of the Avesta itself, which, according to all the best reports of the world, is a compendium of all the supremest statements of wisdom.

12. One marvel is the coming of this also to

<sup>3</sup> The MS. has yazdānō-khiradōh which has the meaning given in the text; but this word can also be read gehānō-khiradōh, 'worldly wisdom,' though gēhānō is the more usual orthography.

Vistāsp, which the archangels announced as a recompense for accepting the religion<sup>1</sup>, as he saw Pēshyōtan the happy ruler, that immortal and undecaying son, not wanting food, large-bodied, completely strong, fully glorious, mighty, victorious, and resembling the sacred beings; the unique splendour of Pēshyōtan for the sovereignty of Kangdez in yonder world, as allotted to him by the creator Aūharmazd, is manifested even through that great wonder to the multitude<sup>2</sup>.

CHAPTER VI.

1. About the marvellousness which is manifested after the departure (vikhēzō) of Zarātūst, whose guardian spirit is reverenced, to the best existence, and in the lifetime of Vistāsp.

2. One marvel is this which is declared by revelation, about the provision of a chariot<sup>3</sup> by Sritō<sup>4</sup> of the Visraps<sup>5</sup>; this is through a famous wonder and

<sup>2</sup> It is singular that nothing is stated here about the death or departure of Zarātūst, which event, according to § 1, ought to have concluded this chapter. But in Chap. III, 39, Dūrāsrōb evidently foretells that Zarātūst will be killed by the evil eye of Brāzrōk-rēsh. In Dk. V, iii, 2, the killing of Zarātūst by Brāzrōk-rēsh the Tūr is merely mentioned. In Zs. XXIII, 9, it is stated that Zarātūst passes away (vidirēdō) forty-seven years after his conference and preaching to Vistāsp. While the modern Persian Zarātūst-nāma does not mention his death, though it speaks of Bartarish as his chief enemy in his younger days. But compare Chap. III, 22.

<sup>3</sup> Pahl. rātē which is written exactly like the Pahlavi ciphers for twenty-two and, no doubt, stands for Av. ratha.

<sup>4</sup> So spelt ten times in §§ 2-11, but here Srātō. It is also Sritō in Dk. V, iii, 2.

<sup>5</sup> Pahl. Visrapān in §§ 9, 11 and Dk. V, iii, 2; but here it is the coming of a report about the marvellousness of that chariot to Vistāsp, Vistāsp's begging that chariot from Sritō, and Sritō saying in reply to Vistāsp: 'That chariot is for a righteous man, in which the soul of Sritō in the lifetime of Sritō's body<sup>1</sup>, and that of that man in the lifetime of his body, come visibly together once in the worldly existence.' 3. And the soul of Sritō, through the generosity of that Sritō, presents that chariot to the eyesight of that man of righteousness; thereby it becomes evident he had seen it, and is told not to act in another manner. 4. The exalted Kāt-Vistāsp, as becoming from revelation more particularly aware of this marvel about the future at that time, and for the sake of this marvel being published to the worldly existence (gēhānīgh), and of his becoming Visrapān, and in § 7 the first letter is omitted, leaving only īsrapān. In Pahl. Vd. XX, 11 (Sp.) we have Srit-ī r̥d̥m (in L4), which latter name may also be īsrapānō, though more likely to be read Sērānō when considered by itself. It is almost certain that the person mentioned in Pahl. Vd. XX, 11 is intended to be the same as that named here in the text. But it is doubtful if this person be the Av. Thrita son of Sāyusdri (or Sāiadri) of Yt. V, 72; XIII, 113. As the legend in the text appears to refer to the soul of Sritō, or Thrita, revisiting the world to meet Vistāsp, this Sritō may have been the warrior Sritō, the seventh brother, employed by Kāt-Ūs, about 350 years earlier, to kill the frontier-settling ox of that time, but there seem to be no means of so identifying him with absolute certainty.

<sup>1</sup> This is the literal meaning of the Pahl. 'mūn rūbān-ī Sritō pavan zindagī-ī Sritō tanō,' but it is not quite consistent with Sritō's return to the earth as a spirit. The Indian copyists seem to have observed this, as they have omitted several words, so as to alter the meaning to the following:—'That chariot is for a man of the righteous, with whom Sritō in the lifetime of that man's body comes visibly together, &c.' But the sentence is not quite grammatical.

nore invoking for the supremacy of the Mazdavorshipping religion, became discernible by those of he realm, is sought for, and is most attended.

5. A great wonder became manifest to Vistāsp and those of the world, just as revelation mentions thus : ' Thereupon the archangels are letting forth the soul of that Sritō from the light of the supreme heaven, from the light on to the earth created by Aharmazd; and the soul of Vistāsp proceeded from him into the light to meet it. 6. Vistāsp proceeded on to the propitious south (rapitvīnō); he was producing more gain than the gainers, and he was more inquisitive than the inquisitive; to all whom he saw he spoke, and unto such as spoke he listened; when he gazed at them looking simultaneously they stood up, and obeisance was offered by them unto the soul and person of Vistāsp.'

7. Immediately upon that no delay occurred until here came on at a run—besides the soul of Sritō of the Visraps—the most horrid (agrandtūm) of demons, from the horrid northern quarter of the horrid destroyer (zādār), that was himself black, and his deeds, too, were very black. 8. And as he comes himself, so also he grumbles to the soul of Sritō thus : ' Give a maintenance (khvārag) to Vistāsp who is thy driver<sup>1</sup>, for the sake of good fellowship and service, and for that, righteousness is suitable unto a pure one; do not give it as a thing which is protective (that is, do not give it for the sake of worldly gratuity), but for love of the righteousness which is owing to the perfect existences.'

9. When those words were fully heard by Sritō of the Visraps, the early bestower (levinō-vakhsh), he stood still and so he spoke in words thus: 'For righteousness I give thee, O mighty Kai-Vistāsp! this chariot which is without a driver, only for love of the righteousness which is owing to the perfect existences.' 10. As much for righteousness as is best for righteousness, and as much for the soul as is best for the soul, the gift of the whole was secured (that is, its acceptance was announced as often as three times).

11. Then that chariot became two chariots, one spiritual and the other worldly; in the worldly one the exalted Kai-Vistāsp travelled forth unto the village of the Nôdars<sup>1</sup> in the joyfulness of good thoughts, and in the spiritual one the soul of Sritô of the Visraps travelled forth unto the best existence.

12. One marvel is this which is declared that in fifty-seven years onwards from the acceptance of the religion by Zaratûst<sup>2</sup>, the arrival of the religion is published in the seven regions<sup>3</sup>; and within the lifetime of Vistāsp, the circumstance (aēdūnōth) is manifested by the coming of some from other regions to Frashôstar of the Hvôbas<sup>4</sup> for enquiry about the

<sup>1</sup> Nôdar (Av. Naotara) was a son of king Mânuskhâr (Bd. XXXI, 13) and an ancestor of king Vistāsp. Vistāsp being a descendant of Kai-Kavâd (Bd. XXXI, 28, 29) who was the adopted son of Auzobô (Bd. XXXI, 24) a son of Zâgh, son of Marvâk, son of Nôdar (Bd. XXXI, 23 corrected from XXXIII, 5). Hûtôs, the wife of Vistāsp, was also of the village of the Nôdars (Yt. XV, 35).

<sup>3</sup> See the summary in Dk. VIII, xiv, 10:—'Likewise, about the communication of Zaratûst's knowledge of the Mazda-worshipping religion to the world, his attracting mankind to the religion, and the ages, after Zaratûst, until the renovation of the universe.'

religion, even as revelation mentions thus: 'Two whose names are thus, Spītōis<sup>1</sup> and Arezrāspō<sup>2</sup>, who have hastened unto Frashōstar of the Hvōbas in search of wisdom.'

13. Thus much splendour and wonder of Vistāsp and those of the realm regarding Zaratūst<sup>3</sup>, and thus much due to the coming of the archangels from the sky to the earth before Vistāsp, as evidence about the true prophesying of Zaratūst<sup>4</sup>; and that, too, about Pēshyōtan<sup>5</sup>, the chariot of Sritō<sup>6</sup>, and other subjects seen written above, are declared by the Avesta, which is the same that they accepted from Zaratūst, as the culmination<sup>7</sup> (avarigānīh) of Aūharmazd's words. 14. And if this splendour, glory, and wonder that are written above as regards what those learned men of the realm saw—which are in the statement revealed by the Avesta—had not occurred, king Vistāsp and those learned men of the realm would not have seen what this Avesta had revealed to them—which was thus much splendour and wonder reported by it to them—and not one word about leaving its preservation to us would be annexed,

CHAPTER VII.

1. About the marvellousness which is manifested after the time of Vistâsp until the collapse (hangaf-tanô) of the sovereignty of Irân.

2. There is marvellousness which is manifested after Vistâsp until the collapse of the sovereignty of Irân, apart from the blessedness of ordeal, the accomplishment of other Avestic rites, the great power over the sacred fires, and many other religious observances which were connected with the disciples of Zaratûst.

3. Even after the devastation which happened owing to Alexander, those who were rulers after him brought back much to the collection from a scattered state<sup>1</sup>; and there are some who have ordered the keeping of it in the treasury of Shapân<sup>2</sup>.

4. Likewise there is to be brought forward what there is concerning the names of rulers and high-priests, such as arrive for it at times and periods, which are each consecutive, as organizers of the religion and the world; also of the tyrant or apostate, who is manifest at various periods, for the disturbance of the religion and monarchy and the penance of the world, with the coming of the penitential one.

<sup>2</sup> So here, but usually written Shapigân, and sometimes Shaspigân. It was no doubt a royal treasury, and Dk. V, iii, 4, calls it so, but uses the words gangô-f khûzâyân, in which Gâmasp is said to have deposited the Avesta and Zand written in gold upon ox-hides. If Shapigân be a corruption of shâyagân, 'royal,' it is singular that some copyist has not corrected the spelling.

5. Such as Vohūmanō, son of Spend-dād<sup>1</sup>, of the rulers, about whom it says even this in the Avesta, that he is Vohūmanō, the just, who is the most efficient of the assembly of Mazda-worshippers.
 6. And Sēnōv<sup>2</sup> of the high-priests, as about him it says even this: 'The religion becomes a hundred years old when Sēnōv is born, and two hundred years when he passes away; he was also the first Mazda-worshipper with a life of a hundred years, and who walks forth upon this earth with a hundred disciples.'

7. Also Alexander of the devastators, as it says even this of him in revelation<sup>3</sup>, that in those three winters, which are of like purpose (ham-ayāzakō), that Aeshm<sup>4</sup> would set up a deadly king in the impenitent world, who is the evil-destined Alexander.

8. And of the high-priests are Arezvāk<sup>5</sup>, the interpretation of whose name is 'the pure word;' Srūtvōk-spādāk<sup>6</sup>, the interpretation of whose name is 'the propitious recitation;' Zrayang,hōu<sup>7</sup>, the interpretation of whose name is 'the ocean existence;' and Spentō-khratvāu<sup>8</sup>, the interpretation of <sup>1</sup> Av. Spentō-dāta of Yt. XIII, 103, a son of Vistāsp, with whom Avesta dynastic history ends. He was the Persian Isfendiyār, and his son Vohūmanō is unknown to the Avesta. The Kitradād Nask (Dk, VIII, xiii, 18) mentions a 'Namūn, son of Spend-shēd,' which probably stands for 'Vohūmanō, son of Spend-dād,' but this appears to have been in a Pahlavi supplement compiled in Sasanian times. He is also mentioned in Bd. XXXIV, 8, a chapter 'about the computation of years by the Arabs,' according to the Irānian Bundāhis.

whose name is 'the propitious wisdom.' 9. Because it says even this about them, namely: 'I mention thy manifestation, and also the tokens of its publicity when this religion of thy Mazda-worshippers becomes four hundred years old<sup>1</sup>; in this law benightedness (lēlyāth) arises, and the embodied existences see the manifestation through calculation of the planets and also the stars; and whoever, too, are mine are so for a century, through the average opinion of thirty medium winters for a man<sup>2</sup>; and the righteous Arevâk and those three others are they of the most righteous existences, over whom they are the most masterly and most authoritative in that time.' 10. And this, too, that they who glorify the religion of the Mazda-worshippers in the fifth and sixth centuries are they; and no persons save their souls, except those who remain for the arrival of the four<sup>3</sup> interpretations that arise through the authority of these four individuals, Arevâk, Srûtô-spâdhau<sup>4</sup>, Zrayang,hau, and Spentô-khratvau who, all four of them, seek their thoughts, words, and deeds in the sacred text (mânsar).

11. Also Rashn-rêsh<sup>5</sup> is the apostate of that

<sup>1</sup> If the chronology in Bd. XXXIV, 7, 8 were correct, the interval between the first revelation of the religion and the death of Alexander would be 272 years, and this would make the 400th year of the religion coincide with B. C. 195.

<sup>2</sup> That is, for a generation. The meaning appears to be, that these four successive high-priests insure the continuance of orthodox religion for more than a century, or well into the sixth century of the religion, as mentioned in § 10.

<sup>5</sup> In Dk. III, cxcviii, 2, this apostate is said to have been an time, as some one<sup>1</sup> says unto Rashn, one of the sacred beings, and about many besides this one, thus: 'All who are creatures of the beneficent spirit are distressed by their persecution, but put trust in those men, Arezvâk and those three others.'

12. And of the organizers of the period is Artakhshatar<sup>2</sup>, son of Pâpak, as it says even this about him, namely: 'Which is that ruler who is powerful, more striving than the Kayâns, and mighty, an embodiment of the sacred commandments and awfully armed<sup>3</sup>; in whose abode Aharišvâng<sup>4</sup>, the virtuous and radiant, walks forth in maiden form, benevolent and very strong, well-formed, high-girded, and truthful, of illustrious race and noble?
 13. Whoever it is that, on the occurrence of strife, seeks prosperity for himself with his own arm; whoever it is that, on the occurrence of strife, encounters the enemies with his own arm.'

14. Tanvasar<sup>5</sup> is also for his assistance, as it says associate (ham-pâšgar) of the Christian ecclesiastic Akvân, and yells out ten admonitions contradicting those of the righteous Sêñôv who is mentioned in § 6 (see Peshotan's edition, vol. v, pp. 239, 311). It does not follow that he was a contemporary of Sêñôv, and here he seems to be placed fully two centuries later.

<sup>3</sup> Most of these qualities are applied to the angel Srôsh, the personification of obedience (see Yas. LVII, 1); also to Kavi Vistâspa and Karsna, son of Zbaurvant, in Yt. XIII, 99, 106.

<sup>4</sup> Av. Ashis vanguhi, 'good rectitude,' personified as a female angel; her description is given in Yt. XIII, 107, and is similar to that of Anâhita in Yt. V, 64.

<sup>5</sup> So spelt here and in §§ 17, 18, thrice in all; it is also thrice spelt Tansar, in Dk. III, last chapter, 7; IV, 25, 25, and this mis-spelling has led to the mis-pronunciation Tôsar. It appears, however, that Tanvasar is a transposition of Tânvârs, 'hairy-this, too, about them : ‘ Zaratûst asked again thus : “ Who is he who is the most salutary for a country, which the demons have exhausted of everything virtuous, over which his authority is brought and which is wicked and teaching falsehood ? ” ’ 15. Aū-harmazd spoke thus : “ An autocrat (sâstâr), to cure a country, who has not gone mad (that is, he does not annoy the good) and is well-directing (that is, he gives virtuous commands), who is also of noble race, and likewise a priest who is acquainted with war, of a famous province, and righteous, are most salutary for that country. 16. And I tell thee this, that the apostasy of destruction is just like the four-legged wolf which the world gives up to running astray (vardak-takhshisnîh) (that is, owing to its action they are leading it off as astray; which is so that even he who is not opulent is rendered sickly, that they (the apostates) may take away his things by the hand of the assassin (khûnyân); and they shall lead the world, the dwelling for his residence, into wandering. 17. But that wicked (avârûnô) strife descended upon that country, besides that wicked demon-worship, besides that wicked slander; and not even that wicked strife, nor that wicked demon-worship, nor that wicked slander, is dissipated from

Bodied,’ because we are told that Tansar, or Tanvasar, was so called on account of all his limbs being covered with hair (vars). This statement occurs in the introduction to Tanvasar’s letter to Gushnaspshâh (Ar. Gasnasi-shâh), king of Pazashkhvârgar (Ar. Farshvâdgâr) and Tabaristân; and is made on the authority of an old Pahlavi copyist, Bahrâm Khûrzâd, whose Pahlavi was translated into Arabic by Ibn al-Muqaffa in the middle of the eighth century, and that into Persian early in the thirteenth century (see Darmesteter’s edition in Journal Asiatique for 1894, pp. 185–250, 502–555).

that country until the time when they attach the grant of approval to him, the spiritual leader, the eloquent (pûr-gûftâr), truthful-speaking, and righteous Tanvasar. 18. And it is when they grant approval to the spiritual leader, the truthful speaker of eloquence, the righteous Tanvasar, that those of the country obtain redress (bêshâzaganîh) when they seek it, and no deviation (anâyûtnakôih) from the religion of Zaratûst.”

19. As to the nature of the questions and statements of the organizer of the religion, Âtûrpâd<sup>1</sup> son of Mâraspend, about the connection of the glory with the race, it also says this, that ‘though righteousness may arise from the statements and prosperity of the Tûrânians when extracted by questions, it is said that its acceptance occurs there through complete mindfulness<sup>2</sup>; they benefit the embodied world of righteousness, and produce distress for the fiend; in like manner, they rely upon Vohûmanô, and Zaratûst is their delight through the report of the birth of Zaratûst from us who are archangels. 20. This liberality for thee is from us who are archangels, and Âtûrpâd, the very best well-destined man arose; and this, too, do thou say about him, that it is the steel age in which that man, the organizer of development and organizer of righteousness, Âtûrpâd son of Mâraspend, of the convocation, begets Avarethrabau<sup>3</sup>:

<sup>1</sup> A high-priest who was prime minister of king Shâhpûhar II (A.D. 309-379). He is often mentioned in Pahlavi writings, but in the Avesta he is only alluded to, apparently, by the title Râstarevaghent in Vt. XIII, 106.

<sup>3</sup> So written, all three times in Pâzand. He is the Avarethra-

21. This Avarethrabāu, too, is an organizer whose righteous guardian spirit we reverence, and in memory of Mānūśkhar, the well-destined, and a progenitor of Ātūrpād<sup>1</sup>, it says that 'only from him comes Avarethrabāu;' and then also arises this one of the adversaries of the religion, the apostate of apostates, whom they have even called the Mazdag-like (Mazdagig-ik)<sup>2</sup>. 22. As it says this, too, about them, namely: 'This religion of mine thou dost survey with thoughts of spiritual life, thou dost very thoroughly inspect it, O Zaratust! when many, aware of apostates, call the performance of righteousness and even the priesthood innocence, and few are frank and practising it'. 23. In the revelation of the Mazda-worshippers is this, namely: 'Thoroughly look into revelation, and seek a remedy for them and any whatever of them who have become disturbing in the embodied existence, and uncaptivated by the orthodox (āyin-a ū mōnd) righteousness which is owing to the perfect existences; and so they divide the religion of the Mazda-worshippers through division of race, they speak regarding the action of their own followers, and give the endowment to their own. 24. They grant supplies of food, so that they may say the food is proportional to the hunger; they speak of procreation, and say that they say lineage is through the mothers; and they approve of wolfishness, so that they would act something like Bangh, son of Rāstare-vaghent of Yt. XIII, 106, better known as Zaratust, son of Ātūrpād in his old age, for whom the Andar'z-i Ātūrpād-i Māraspendān was written.

wolves in the performance of gratifying their desires, like that of the wolf's progeny behind the mother. 25. Moreover, they form their lineage through the mothers ; buying their women as sheep, they shall carry off for profit even that son or brother who is the progeny, those that we have produced for your companionship ; you are not predominant, but have remained in companionship ; you do not even believe them, but you do not establish an ordeal, although it is evident that you will be acquitted ; they lie even to their children, so that the advance of the promise-breaker is through them, and even in their own persons<sup>1</sup>.

26. Here it speaks about the organization of the religion by the glorified<sup>2</sup> Khûsrôî, son of Kavâd, thus : ' Upon their lingering behind, a man is produced who is righteous, the Glorified one<sup>2</sup>, an approver (khêniidâr) of speech who is wise, whom the convocation, on hearing the words that he utters, speaks of as a high-priest ; that is when he gives out penance (srôshigîh), so that he may effect the punishment of sinners. 27. The constant outpouring of perplexity (pêk shâridan) by the perverters is the fear of that hero, as regards that convocation, when he casts them forth by expulsion from the vicinity, so that he may make them extinguished very quickly; owing to that, they, whose producer is even he who is a person destroying the righteous man, become gloomy on account of the Glorified one, through his smiting the spiritual life of apostasy; just as now, when he who is gloomy, and of scattered intellect, is gloomy owing to you of the Spītāmas.' 28. This, too, it states, namely: 'In every way, I tell thee, O Zarātūst of the Spītāmas! that their time is mistrustful (avāvar) as to him who is an open friend, and most deceitful both to the wicked and the righteous; the Glorified one is a controller (ayākhtār) exalting the creatures, and whoever is possessing the creatures of the righteous ones<sup>1</sup>, so that he remains again at work in the doings of the Glorified one, is he who is a combiner of the actions and an utterer of the true replies of that Glorified one'.

<sup>1</sup> This quotation, from a Pahlavi version of an Avesta text, would probably be very applicable to the state of the Persian people at many periods in the fourth and fifth centuries, when heresy was prevalent and orthodox Zoroastrianism was by no means universal. Some of the evils mentioned are inseparable from slavery at all times.

<sup>2</sup> Literally 'immortal-souled,' Anôshak-rûbân, the usual title of king Khûsrô I, who reigned A.D. 531-578. Before he became king, A.D. 528 or 529, he had summoned an assembly of priests to condemn the heretic Mazdag, when the last important revision of the Pahlavi versions of the Avesta probably took place (see Byt. I, 6-8, and Nöldeke's Gesch. der Sas. pp. 463-466).

29. And about the occurrence of a symptom of the devastators of the sovereignty and religion of the country of Irān one wonder, which is associated with the religion, is even this which it mentions thus: 'Thereupon, when the first symptom of a ravager of the country occurs, O righteous Zarātūst! then the more aggressive and more unmerciful in malice becomes the tyrant of the country, and through him, too, they ravage (rēshēnd) the house, through him the village, through him the community, through him the province, and through him even the whole of that manifestation in the country of any teaching whatever that occurs through the ravager of the country; and so the country should keep a man who is observant and learned on the watch, because information is in his mind. 30. Thereupon, when the second symptom of a ravager of the country occurs, &c.<sup>1</sup> . . . . .

31. Thereupon, when the third symptom of a ravager of the country occurs, the priestly people are disturbing the tradition, so that they speak nothing wisely; it is even on this account they do not accept them, and it is not when one speaks truly that the ravager of the country believes them, and through him, too, they ravage the house, through him the village, through him the community, through him the province, and through him even the whole of that manifestation in the country of any teaching whatever that occurs through the ravager of the country; and so, too, the country should keep a man who is observant and learned on the watch, because information is in his mind. 32. Thereupon, when the fourth symptom of a ravager of the country occurs, it upsets the replenishment of the fires, and upsets those men of the righteous, so that they shall not undertake the care of them; and thus they shall not convey the holy-water to him who is a priestly authority, so that they may not produce the seizing upon the stipend of the priestly authorities by him who is the ravager of the country; through him, too, they ravage the house, through him the village, through him the community, through him the province, and through him even the whole of that

<sup>1</sup> The whole of this section is omitted in the old MS., evidently by mistake. Perhaps the second symptom of devastation was connected with the evil deeds of the warrior class, but this is very uncertain. Passages of four or five words are also omitted by the MS. in §§ 31, 32.

manifestation in the country of any teaching whatever that occurs through the ravager of the country; and so, too, the country should keep a man who is observant and learned on the watch, because information is in his mind.'

33. About the collapse of the sovereignty of Irân, it also states this, namely: 'That very villain (mar), O Zaratûst! brings those provinces on to running astray, so that he may make those quite dissevered which constitute the existence of that powerful sovereignty; and then he is a thorough assailant of the righteous, then he is an assailant of the righteous with eagerness. 34. That same deadly one (mar), O Zaratûst! does not continue living long afterwards; moreover his offspring disappear (that is, they perish utterly); but his soul falls to the bottom of the gloomy existence which is horrible hell, and upon their bodies every kind of unseemly unhappiness comes from themselves, owing to their own actions when they give approval to the imprisonment of a guardian of spiritual affairs who is eloquent, true-speaking, and righteous. 35. Against that deadly one he contends, O Zaratûst! for the spiritual lordship and priestly authority that I approve as good for the whole embodied existence; also against the preparation of a decree to produce evil decisions, and against the dismissal of litigants, whether heterodox or orthodox, who are of a family of serfs of a far-situated village and are making petitions.'

36. 'And as to the land, too, over which he wanders, the evil spirit utterly devastates their country through pestilence and other misery; and, moreover, strife which is tormenting falls upon that country, besides demon-worship which is iniquitous, and besides slander which is iniquitous. 37. And the strife which is iniquitous is not to be dissipated (apâst-aitanô) from that country, nor the demon-worshippers who are iniquitous, nor the slander which is iniquitous, before the time when they give approval to him, to the priest who is a guardian of spiritual affairs, who is eloquent, true-speaking, and righteous; and it is when they give him approval, that they obtain healthfulness for their country when they pray for it, and not irregularly from him, O Zarathûst!'

38. And this which is recounted is a statement that is execrated (nafrig-aitô) by many, details from the Avesta as to occurrences that will arise after Vistâsp until the dispersion (angâvisnô) of the sovereignty of Irân from the country of Irân; it is also declared that this which is written happened to the knowledge of those of the world. 39. This, too, is about the evidence of the above:—'And if this which is declared from the Avesta, as to what happens after Kâl-Vistâsp until the end of the sovereignty of Irân, should not have happened, and it being the pre-eminence of the Avesta which really became this present treasure, it thereby ensues, owing to its position in that former<sup>1</sup>, and the manifest absence of the destruction of those rulers and high-priests from Vistâsp onwards in this latter<sup>2</sup>, that it could not be connected with us<sup>3</sup>'

<sup>3</sup> Meaning perhaps that, for some good reason, it could not be communicated to us in the extant Avesta. If § 39 be not a later addition to this chapter, it implies that the prophetic quotations from the Avesta, regarding the history of the religion after the time

CHAPTER VIII.

1. About the marvellousness which is manifested and is openly specified after the collapsing of the sovereignty of Irân and the country of Irân; also the end of the millennium of Zaratûst and the arrival of Aûshêdar the descendant of Zaratûst<sup>1</sup>.
2. There is this marvellousness, really overthrowing the blessedness of the knowledge of former government, revealed by the Avestâ about the ninth and tenth centuries, that which is an indicator of circumstances (aêdûnöih) now visible, such as the dispersion of the sovereignty of Irân from the country of Irân, the disturbance of just law and custom, the predominance of those with dishevelled hair<sup>2</sup>, and the haughty profession of ecclesiastics<sup>3</sup>.
3. Also the collection and even connection of all their four systems of belief (vâvari-hastanô)<sup>4</sup> to-

of Vîstâsp, were no more extant in the Avestâ, when the Dînkard was compiled, than they are now.

<sup>1</sup> The contents of Chaps. VII–XI have some connection with the following summary in Dk. VIII, xiv, 11, 12:—‘And about the nature of the advancement of the people of the period, the separation of centuries and millenniums, and the signs, wonders, and perplexity which are manifested in the world at the end of each millennium in the world. Also as to the birth and arrival of Aûshêdar, son of Zaratûst, at the end of the first millennium, and a report of him and his time, and of the many destroyers of the organizers of the period between Zaratûst’s millennium and the coming of Aûshêdar.’

<sup>2</sup> This meaning for vigârdö -vars is chiefly based upon the use of vigârd in AV. XXXIV, 5, for a woman’s hair being ‘combed.’ These invaders of Irân from the east, at the end of the first millennium of the religion, are mentioned in Byt. II, 22, 24, 28; III, 1, 6, 13. They are called ‘Turkish demons’ in § 47.

gether for the upper rank; the coming of one working with the sacred beings to the inferior, the transient, and the captive of the period; and the dispersion and downfall of dependent and public men in their time.

4. The disappearance of a disposition for wisdom from the foreigners in the countries of Irân, which is an indication of shame at the truth of the religion, and at the praise, peace, liberality, and other goodness whose provision has lodgement in a disposition for wisdom.

5. Also the abundance of the decisions of apostasy, the falsehood, deceit, slander, quarrel-someness, fraudulence, ingratitude, discord, stinginess, and other vileness whose real connection is a disposition to devour, neglecting heedfulness for the archangels of fire, water, and worldly existence<sup>1</sup>.

6. The oppressiveness of infidelity and idol-worship, the scarcity of freedom, the extreme predominance of avarice in the individuals (tanō) of mankind, the plenitude of different opinions about witchcraft, and the much inclination of many for paralyzing the religion of the sacred beings.

7. The annihilation of the sovereignty of mankind one over the other, the desolation of localities and settlements by severe actual distress, and the evil foreign potentates who are, one after the other, scattering the valiant; the destruction among cattle and the defilement of the spirit of enjoyment, owing to the lodgement of lamentation and weeping in the countries of Irân, the clamour of the demon-worshipper in the country, and the unobtainable stature, non-existent strength, blighted destiny, and short life of mankind. 8. Also the abundance of ordinances (âyinô)<sup>1</sup> of various descriptions, the approval of the apostate among tyrants and the non-approval of the Zoti<sup>2</sup> who is well-disposed and wise, the coming of the Zoti to want, and all the other adversity, disruption, and running astray which are overpowering even in districts and localities of the countries of Irân.

9. The maintenance of no ritual (apandih) of the religion of the sacred beings; the weakness, suffering, and evil habits of those of the good religion; the lamentation and recantation (khûstûkîh) of the upholders of the religion; and the wickedness and extermination of good works in most of the countries of Irân. 10. Also much other misery in these two centuries is recounted in the Avesta, which passed away with them and is also now so visible therein, and manifestly occurs in them.

11. This, too, is a statement (nisang-i) as to them, which revelation mentions thus: ‘That is the age mingled with iron (that is, from every side they perceive it is of iron) in which they bring forth into life him who is a sturdy praying apostate. 12. This is their sturdiness, that their approval is unobservant of both doctrines (âtnakô); and this is their praying, that whenever it is possible for them they shall cause misery to others; also when an old man publicly advances into a crowd (galakô) of youths, owing to the evil times in which that man who is learned is born, they are unfriendly to him (that is, they are no friends of the high-priests of the priestly assembly). 13. They are freely speaking (that is, they utter phrases smoothly), they are wicked and are fully maliciously talking, so that they shall make the statements of priests and high-priests useless; they also tear asunder the spiritual lordship and priestly authority, and shall bring the ruler and priestly authority into evil behaviour as vicious, but they bring together those who are singular. 14. Anything they say is always mischief (agīth), and that district which had a judge they cast into the smiting precinct, into hell; it is misery without any intermission they shall inflict therein, till they attain unto damnation (darvandīh) through the recitation they persevere in, both he who is the evil progeny disseminated by the apostate and he who is the villainous wolf full of disaster and full of depravity.'

15. 'Here below they fight, the friend with him who is a friend, they also defraud (zivēnd) him of his own work (that is, whenever it is possible for them, they shall seize upon his property), and they give it to him from whom they obtain prosperity in return; if not, they seek him who is acting as a confederate (nishin-gūn), and they make that other one defraud the poor man (so that they shall seize upon his property); they also cheat him when he shall make complaint. 16. I shall not again produce such for thee, no friend here for him who is a friend, no brother for him who is a brother, no son for him who is a father, nor yet a father for him who is a son; admonished, but not convinced, they become the abode of the will of the place, so that they subsist in every single place where it is necessary for them to be, in each that is necessary for them they march on together, and on the way they reflect upon the path of blessedness and the manifold learning they utter owing to knowledge of me<sup>1</sup>.

17. 'These three, our increase, learning, and reward, we fully understand through the ascendancy of him who is ignoble, and through the downfall of him who is noble and superior to him of little thorough instruction who, in every thing, will be at the foot of the tyrant. 18. Thinking of a priest one becomes spiritual, thinking of a tyrant one becomes a Kavig<sup>2</sup>; a demon in disposition is an incipient demon, a Kavig in disposition is himself attracted towards a youth.'

19. Then, when character and wisdom recede from the countries of Irân (that is, they depart), so that destitution and also winter, produced by demons who are worshipping the demon, rush together from the vicinity of disaster (vôighn) on to the countries of Irân, where even rain becomes scanty and pestilence is secretly advancing and deceiving, so that deaths become numerous; thus even he of perverted wisdom, who is wicked, and the apostate also, who is unrighteous, rush together in companionship.

20. As what one says they all exclaim thus: 'Consume and destroy, O ruler! for it is to be consumed and destroyed by thee; destroy even the fire, consume even as food those who are the protection of the association enforcing religious obedience, and those leading on the poor man of the righteous dispensation by their guidance.' 21. So that they shall make him thoroughly detached and smite him; likewise wisdom is the wealth they bring him, and it is when property is being carried off by them, that the wisdom conveyed by them arises.

<sup>1</sup> So far, this statement (§§ 11-16) seems to be ascribed to Atharmazd; but what follows (§§ 17, 18, 20) appears to represent the sentiments of some Irânians of those later times.

22. 'And in that age, O righteous one of the Spîtâmas! the coming of my desire is not purely for thee, nor is a thorough belief of the departure of life, so that the bringing and conducting of a speaker of promises (mitragôv) is not necessary; those of the perfect apostate injure this discourse of thine, the Avesta and Zand, so that they shall make it thoroughly weak; and those of the perfect apostate harass their own souls, for love of the wealth which he produced.'

23. And about the ninth and tenth centuries this also it says, that, 'as that age proceeds, this is what occurs, O Zaratûst of the Spîtâmas! when many apostates utter the righteousness of priestly instruction and authority, which is wickedness towards me, they cause begging for water, they wither vegetation, and they put down all excellence which is due to the manifestation of righteousness.'

24. Again Zaratûst enquired of him thus: 'What do they so produce by that, O Aûharmazd! when they cause begging for water, they wither vegetation, and they put down all excellence due to the manifestation of righteousness?' 25. And Aûharmazd spoke thus: 'They so produce those things among them, O Zaratûst! when they mention a greater reward for bantlings and relations than that of their own souls (that is, they talk more concerning their allowance, where it is that for their own). 26. Moreover, they give to the Kigs and Karaps, for some repute with the shepherd people of the husbandman, and with the swift-horsed people of the warrior, as though they would provide us<sup>1</sup> here below with a large share of meat, that they would make our privilege, just as we<sup>1</sup> here supply him with meat whom we render greatly precious. 27. The property of even a wicked man here below, O Zaratûst! in the average opinion among the disorganized (anârâstânô) is a dignified provision (that is, we form a strong opinion, the approval of which is more to be asserted as being the opinion of a poor righteous man, about a worthy righteous man whose manifest righteousness is a homage (franâmisnô) to duty and good works).

28. Again he enquired of him thus: 'Is there so perfect a manifestation here below, in the age of the worldly existence of the religion of the Mazda-worshippers (that is, is there a lodgement of the religion of the Mazda-worshippers in any one)?' 29. And Aûharmazd spoke thus: 'It is so, among those men of mine<sup>2</sup>, O Zaratûst! for here below there are priests who are eloquent, and they, too, are men voluble and requisite in the embodied existence, all-beneficent and producing the destruction of harm and the wizard; the people of the wicked tyrant say also regarding them, that, excepting thee, O Zaratûst! they rightly practise righteousness more largely, more powerfully, and more volubly. 30. Blind are those of the fiend, who are consulting with thee and are unaware of the tyrant; and observant are also those of the fiend who consult with them and think of their intelligence, and oppose the imbecile (anâkâsh-aûmônd) apostate who is near them, so that they say<sup>1</sup> this, namely : "As to this which thou tellest us, it is evidently not so as thou sayest," of which they speak thus : "This duty of thy man is not mine (that is, it is not necessary for me to perform) nor thine (that is, it is not necessary even for thee to perform), because it is not this which is righteousness (that is, not a good work)." 31. For this one is produced for these words and thoughts of thine, of whom thou, too, art aware, he who is whatever is here below of Aûshêdar<sup>2</sup> of thoughtful controversy, O Zarâtûst of the Spîtâmas! for he brings into notice, through the intermingling of his own soul, him who is righteous, or has not become so.'

32. This, too, he says, namely : "Of those, O Zarâtûst of the Spîtâmas! who come in the ninth and tenth centuries, I tell thee that they are of the fiend of Greed (Âzi); it is in her womb that they are to be fashioned, they who assist those who would be vicious, through pre-eminence in leadership, or through excellence in subserviency."

33. And this, too, it says about them : "Those men are much to be destroyed;" so it is said by Aûharmazd that 'these who are righteous, who carry away a corpse in this world, distress their fire, according to every high-priest<sup>3</sup>, and even long-flowing water; their bodies, which are really cess-pools<sup>4</sup> of a terrible character, become very assisting for the tormentors whose corpses are grievously wicked.' 34. Concerning them I tell thee, O Zar- tūst of the Spitāmas! that, in the ninth and tenth centuries, there come those who are the brood of the fiend and the wound-producer (reshgār)<sup>1</sup> of the evil spirit; even one of them is more to be destroyed than ten demon-worshippers<sup>2</sup>; they also produce extermination for these who are mine, for these of my religion, whom they call a provision for destruction (that is, when it is possible to live in our way, and ours are wicked, they diminish in superiority).

35. Even the iniquity that they shall commit in leadership and subserviency, the sin which is smiting thee, they call a trifle (khalakō), O pure one of the Spitāmas! and the smiter, they say, is he whom these of thy religion of Mazda-worshippers smite.

36. Besides thee, O Zaratūst! they distress those duties, too, which are to be acquired by thy people (lagānō); they think scornfully of this ceremonial of thine, scornfully of thy worship, O Zaratūst! and they think scornfully of both the two blessed utterances<sup>3</sup>, the Avesta and Zand, which were proclaimed to thee by me who am the most propitious of spirits.

37. They foster villainous outrage, and they say the best work for mankind is immoderate fighting whose joyfulness is due to actions that are villainous; those, too, that they exterminate are the existences due to the spirits, they exterminate their own souls, they exterminate the embodied existences of the world; and they produce lamentation for the soul, and even the religion, as regards what is the mode of controlling orthodox people together with the iniquitous of the same period.<sup>4</sup>

38. And this, too, it says, that Zaratūst enquired of Aûharmazd thus : ' So what shall we prescribe for those who are not capable, through being poor (that is, they have no means), nor have they troops, nor a protector over them, and they have many persecutors ? ' 39. And Aûharmazd spoke thus : ' The strong-minded<sup>1</sup> man, through understanding, is a token of the development of those who, not being in the army, are capable ; their persecutors also are many, and the passing over of authority is owing to the iniquitous of the same period.'

40. This, too, it says, that Zaratûst enquired thus : ' Is he, O Aûharmazd ! who is a Kai or a Karap, or he who is a most evil ruler in authority, mingled again with the good ? ' 41. And Aûharmazd spoke thus : ' Even he<sup>2</sup> ! '

42. Zaratûst also enquired thus : ' Is he, too, O Aûharmazd ! who is one of those of the good sovereignty, mingled again with the good ; or these, such as the Kaisar and Khâkân<sup>3</sup> ? ' 43. And Aûharmazd spoke thus : ' Even that former, O Zaratûst ! '

44. About the same iniquitous<sup>4</sup> this, too, he says, namely : ' When they are aware and understand about the sayings (galimakô) due to righteousness, they are pleased, so that a bribe seems better to them than duty and good works ; they love the darkness rather than light, the existence they love is the worst existence rather than the best existence, and they promote difficulty. 45. Concerning them, too, I tell thee that they are more to be destroyed than the leaping (shaspō) serpent which is like a wolf or a lion, and they ever advance in malice and persecution from that time till when that man arrives who is Kitrō-mēhōnō<sup>1</sup> the righteous, with the victorious club. 46. He has marched with fifty triplets of men<sup>2</sup> who are disciples, powerful and tall, looking after duties and ordinances, wide-shouldered, stout-armed, and very hairy (kabed-millh), so that their appearance is rough and of a black colour<sup>3</sup>, wherefore the demon and the iniquity proceeding from him fear them. 47. He also smites the evil spirit, together with his creatures; and those three manifest branches, that worship the fiend with simultaneous worship, are really these who march for eminent service on horses, even the Turkish demons with dishevelled hair, the Arab, and also Shedāspō<sup>4</sup> the ecclesiastical Arūman.

<sup>1</sup> So spelt here, but in Dk. IX, xli, 6, it is Kitrag-mēhōnō, and other slight variations occur in the best MSS. of Bd. XX, 7, 31; XXIX, 5; Byt. III, 25, 26; Dd. XC, 3; but they can all be traced to an original Kitrō-mēhan = Av. Kithrō-maēthanem, 'of the racial home,' a title applied both to the river and the immortal sacerdotal ruler of Kangdez. The latter is supposed to be Pēshyōtanō, a son of king Vistāsp, who is expected to restore religious rites in Irān and throughout the world.

<sup>2</sup> With 150 disciples, as stated in Byt. III, 27, 29, 42. Here it is written levat̄ 50 3-gabráān.

<sup>4</sup> In Byt. III, 3, 5, 8; 21, this name is written Shēdāspīh which can also be read Shēdāspas, and is probably a corrupt pronunciation of the name of some Byzantine emperor or general (such as Theodosius) who had signally defeated the Persians some time in the fifth to seventh century, in which period Zarātūst's millennium probably ended.

48. 'And he has then to attract men, contented and discontented, mostly through the incentive of duty; he who is not contented (that is, not agreeing with what he says) contentedly pays respect to him, O Zarātūst! (so that he brings him into the religion). 49. Likewise, through that club, he makes one press in the same manner; so that one is distressed by his hand to hold others in contempt, through the valiant arm and through the youthful bodily organs. 50. And he attaches power and triumph to his religion of Aūharmazd, and through that power and triumph they become ever respected thenceforth, when those arrive who are the sons of Zarātūst, who shall produce the renovation in an existence undecaying and immortal, hungerless and thirstless, the long-continued perpetuity including all.'

51. And about the separation (burīnakð) of the ten centuries in the one millennium of Zarātūst, and the tidings of Aūshēdar<sup>1</sup>, son of Zarātūst, it says also this, namely: 'When that century fully elapses which is the first of the religion of the Mazda-worshippers, from the time when Zarātūst came forward to his conference, what is the separation of this first century?' 52. And Aūharmazd spoke thus: 'The sun conceals itself.' 53. 'What is the separation after the second, third, fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh, eighth, ninth, or tenth century?' 54. And Aūharmazd spoke thus: 'The sun conceals itself'

55. Then, when thirty winters of the tenth century are unelapsèd (that is, thirty winters are remaining) a maiden, who is Shemig-abū<sup>2</sup>, walks up to the water; she that is the mother of that famous Aushēdar, and her former lineage is from Vôhû-rôkô-i Frahányân<sup>1</sup> in the family of Isadvâstar, the son of Zaratûst that is brought forth by Arang. 56. Then she sits in that water and drinks it, and she kindles in a high degree those germs which were the third of the last that the righteous Zaratûst was dropping forth originally, and they introduce that son whose name is the Developer of Righteousness<sup>2</sup>. 57. Though she is fifteen years old, the girl (kanig) has not before that associated with men<sup>3</sup>; nor afterwards, when she becomes pregnant, has she done so before the time when she gives birth.

58. When that man becomes thirty years old, the sun stands still in the zenith (bâlistö) of the sky for the duration of ten days and ten nights, and it arrives again at that place where it was first appointed by allotment, where it occupies one finger-breadth out of the four finger-breadths, and it shines over all the regions which are seven. 59. So, too, O Zaratûst! of them themselves, their declaration is thus, that they know that the separation of the millennium, which this religion has heard about by listening, is thus; and of those who do not even then know, that it is something which is different.

60. Then, when that man becomes thirty years old, he confers with the archangels, the good rulers and good providers; on the morrow, in the daylight of the day, it is moreover manifest, when the embodied existence is thus undistressed—without

61. These are the characteristics as regards the two centuries which are the ninth and tenth; the accuracy of what was to come has continued and this has happened, and both are declared as regards the accuracy which is stated on evidence as to what will happen.

CHAPTER IX.

1. About the marvellousness which is after the end of the millennium of Zarâtûst and the arrival of Aûshêdar, until the end of the millennium of Aûshêdar and the arrival of Aûshêdar-mâh; and as to tidings of the same period.

2. The marvellousness of Aûshêdar as to birth<sup>2</sup>, glory of person, sayings and actions; the standing of the sun ten days amid the sky<sup>3</sup>; the perishing of the fiend of the four-legged race; the production of a three-spring cloudless influence<sup>4</sup> for vegetation; the weakening of superfluity and destitution; the extreme strengthening of alliance; the gratification due to the good friendship of foreigners; the great increase of the wisdom of religion; and the praise

After those winters, the abundant and great increase in the milk of cattle, and the abundant nourishment of mankind by milk; the less distress of body in cattle, the fullness and prosperity of the world, the celebrity of assembled mankind, and the great increase of liberality. 6. Also the feebleness

<sup>1</sup> Av. Mahrkūsha of Westergaard's Fragment VIII, 2, who is evidently a wizard or fiend; according to Pahl. Vd. II, 49 (Sp.) the evil winter which was foretold to Yim is called the winter of Markūs. In later times this name has been understood as Heb. Malkōs, 'autumnal rain'; so the idea of the fatal freezing winter of Mahrkūs, the intender of death, was abandoned for that of the deluging rain of Malkōs, as in Mkh. XXVII, 28. In Dd. XXXVII, 94, both snow and rain are mentioned as produced by Mahrkūs or Markūs (as it is always written in Pahlavi), and in Sd. IX, 5 only his name is stated. The most complete account of him is given in our text.

of poverty among mankind, just like what revelation mentions thus : 'Even so he, O Zarātūst! though he be more unfortunate than he who is accepting from him, is like the creator whose bounty of permanent liberality does thus, in the embodied existence, remain in his dwelling.'

7. And this, too, it says, namely : 'When that winter passes away, of which it is said that it is boisterous and destructive<sup>1</sup>, then a wild beast, black and wide-travelling, walks up to the Mazda-worshippers, and thus it thinks, that they who worship Mazda will therefore not finally hate us more than him who is their own progeny, the son whom they thus bring up as a Mazda-worshipper here below, in fondness and freedom from malice towards well-yielding cattle.

8. 'Then Ashavahistō calls out to the Mazda-worshippers from the upper region, and thus he speaks : " You are for the worship of Mazda ; let no one of you become such a slaughterer of cattle as the slaughterers you have been before. 9. Recommend increase in gifts, recommend neighbourliness in person ; are you worshipping Mazda ? do you slaughter cattle ? do you slaughter those of them which give you assistance, which speak to you thus : 'On account of your helpfulness one tells you that you are worshipping Mazda and you may eat ?' I am in neighbourliness before that, until the time when you exclaim : ' Mine are the serpent and toad.'

10. " And you recommend increase, you recommend neighbourliness, and the Mazda-worshippers slaughter cattle, even those of them who give them assistance, so that you are worshipping Mazda and you eat; I am in neighbourliness before that, until the time when you exclaim: 'Mine are the serpent and toad.'

11. "Contentedly the Mazda-worshippers slaughter cattle, contentedly the cattle of the Mazda-worshippers let them butcher<sup>1</sup>, and contented are the cattle when they do not butcher them; contentedly the Mazda-worshippers eat cattle, and contented are the cattle when they eat them. 12. And then, when there are spirits, the slaughterers and whatever they slaughter, the butchers and whatever they butcher, and the eaters and whatever they eat are alike watched by them."

13. And this, too, it says, namely: 'When that century fully elapses, which is the fifth in the second millennium as regards the religion of the Mazda-worshippers, then of all those who are upon the earth, the existences which are both wicked and righteous, two-thirds in the land of Irân are righteous and one-third wicked; and so likewise the Tûrâniacs and those who are around Irân remain non-Irânian around Irân; the chief increase in dwellings here below, of those in the embodied existence, remains just as now.'

14. And this, too, it says, namely: 'When that millennium has fully elapsed, which is the first of the religion of the Mazda-worshippers, what is the separation after the first century?' 15. And Aûharmazd spoke thus: 'The sun conceals itself.' 16. 'And what is the separation after the second, third, fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh, eighth, ninth, or tenth century?' 17. And Aūharmazd spoke thus: 'The sun conceals itself.'

18. Then, when thirty winters of the tenth century are unelapsèd (arānakō), a maiden, who is Shapirabū<sup>1</sup>, walks up to the water; she that is the mother of that good Aūshēdar-mâh<sup>2</sup>, and her former lineage is from Vôhû-rôkô-i Frahânyân<sup>3</sup> in the family of Isadvâstar, the son of Zaratûst that is brought forth by Arang. 19. Then she sits in that water and drinks it, and she kindles in a high degree those germs which were the second of the last that the righteous Zaratûst was dropping forth originally, and they introduce that son whose name is the Developer of Worship<sup>4</sup> (that is, he augments liberality). 20. Though fifteen years old, the damsel (zihānakō) has not before that associated with men; nor yet afterwards; when she becomes pregnant, has she done so before the time when she gives birth<sup>5</sup>.

21. When that man becomes thirty years old, the sun stands still in the zenith of the sky for the duration of twenty days and nights<sup>6</sup>, and it shines over all the regions which are seven. 22. So, too, the declaration of them themselves is that they know that the separation of the millennium, which this religion has heard about by listening, is even thus; and of those who do not even then know, that it is something which is different.

23. When that man becomes thirty years old, he confers with the archangels, the good rulers and good providers; on the morrow, in the daylight of the day, it is moreover manifest, when the embodied existence is thus undistressed—without a Kāt and without a Karap (that is, not blind and not deaf to the affairs of the sacred beings), and is to be appropriated (that is, has not made its own self apart from the affairs of the sacred beings), and is produced full of life—that it has become extending, and is again great in various places in Aitrān-vēg where the good Dātti is.

CHAPTER X.

1. About the marvellousness which is after the end of the millennium of Aūshēdar and the arrival of Aūshēdar-māh, until the end of the millennium of Aūshēdar-māh and the arrival of Sôshâns; and as to tidings of the same period.

2. The marvellousness of Aūshēdar-māh as to birth<sup>1</sup>, glory of person, sayings, and actions; the standing of the sun amid the sky twenty days long<sup>2</sup>; and the increase of the milk of cattle arrives at a maximum (avartum), just as what it says, that one milks only one mature cow (tôrâ az) for a thousand men, and that he brings as much milk as a thousand men require; also the feebleness of hunger and thirst is just as it says, that by only a single ration one becomes satisfied for three nights; and whoever eats a leg of mutton has plenty for himself for three days and nights. 3. The diminution of decay and extension (vēshth) of life, the increase of humility and peace, and the perfection of liberality and enjoyment in the world.

4. Like this which revelation states, that, when the first ten winters in the last millennium pass away, the Mazda-worshippers then make enquiry together thus: 'Are we really more hairy-headed (sar-varshik-tar) than occurred before, owing to the well-yielding cattle, so that food and clothing are less necessary for us? Has affection come to us more completely, owing to those cattle, than it was ours before? Have we grown up less deteriorated in the hair, by old age, than those grown up before? Are the thoughts, words, and deeds of our women and children more instructed than they were before? 5. And has this thing occurred, that he is classed as disqualified who in training a child has become quite retrogressive (pas-āruzd), and is his penalty arranged? Does the fiend think of the Karap class, and are they utterly destroyed by her through those whose thoughts are most evil, devoid of righteousness, and devoid of a liking for righteousness? 6. Near here, in the disturbance of the existences, does that happen as heard by us from the ancients, when listening to the true proclaimers of the Mazda-worshippers? And now, even when our numbers are so greatly maintaining this dispensation, do we sanctify (aharāyinem) righteousness (that is, do we perform duty and good works) more vociferously and more strenuously?'

7. This, too, it says, even that no one passes away in the last millennium, other than those whom they smite with a scaffold weapon<sup>1</sup>, and those who pass away from old age. 8. When fifty-three years of that millennium of his have remained, the sweetness and oiliness in milk and vegetables are so completed that, on account of the freedom of mankind from wanting meat, they shall leave off the eating of meat, and their food becomes milk and vegetables. 9. When three years have remained, they shall leave off even the drinking of milk, and their food and drink become water and vegetables.

10. And in his millennium are the breaking (lānakō) of the fetters of Dahāk<sup>2</sup>, the rousing of Kerēsāspō<sup>3</sup> for the smiting of Dahāk, the arrival of Kai-Khūsrō<sup>4</sup> and his companions for the assistance of Sōshāns in the production of the renovation of the universe, and the provision of most of mankind with the Gāthic disposition and law; also the occurrence of many other wonders and marvels is manifest in that millennium of his.

11. And this, too, it says, namely: 'When that millennium has fully elapsed, which is the second of the religion of the Mazda-worshippers, what is the separation after the first century?' 12. And Atharmazd spoke thus: 'The sun conceals itself.' 13. 'And what is the separation after the second, third, fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh, eighth, ninth, or tenth century? 14. And Aûharmazd spoke thus: 'The sun conceals itself.'

15. And when thirty winters of the tenth century are unelapsèd, that maiden, who is Gôbâk-abû<sup>1</sup>, walks up to the water; she that is the mother of that testifying Sôshâns who is the guide to conveying away the opposition of the destroyer, and her former lineage is from Vôhû-rôkô-i Frahânyân<sup>2</sup> in the family of Îsadvâstar, the son of Zaratûst that is brought forth by Arang. 16. 'That maiden whose title is All-overpowerer is thus all-overpowering, because through giving birth she brings forth him who overpowers all, both the affliction owing to demons, and also that owing to mankind<sup>3</sup>.' 17. Then she sits in that water, when she is fifteen years old; and it introduces into the girl him 'whose name is the Triumphant Benefiter, and his title is the Body-maker; such a benefiter as benefits (savinêdô) the whole embodied existence, and such a body-maker, alike possessing body and possessing life, as petitions about the disturbance of the embodied existences and mankind<sup>4</sup>.' 18. Not before that has she associated with men; nor yet afterwards, when she becomes pregnant, has she done so before the time when she gives birth<sup>5</sup>.

CHAPTER XI.

1. About the marvellousness which is after the end of the millennium of Aushēdār-māh and the arrival of the Triumphant Benefiter, until the end of the fifty-seventh year of Sōshāns and the production of the renovation among the existences.

2. Concerning the marvellousness of Sōshāns as to splendour and glory of person, it says that 'when the coming of the last rotation of those rotations of the seasons of Aushēdār-māh occurs, the man Sōshāns is born<sup>1</sup> whose food is spiritual and body sunny (that is, his body is as radiant as the sun);' also this, that 'he looks on all sides with six-eyed power (6-dōtsarīh), and sees the remedy for persecution by the fiend.'

3. This, too, that with him is the triumphant Kayān glory 'which the mighty Frēdūn<sup>2</sup> bore when Az̄-i Dahāk<sup>3</sup> was smitten by him; also Kai-Khūsrōī<sup>4</sup> was bearing it when the Tūr Frangrāsiyāk<sup>5</sup> was smitten by him; also Frangrāsiyāk bore it when the Drvē Zēnigāk<sup>6</sup> was smitten by him; and Kai-

Vistāsp<sup>1</sup> shall bear it when you fully attract him to righteousness, and through it he shall carry off the fiend from the concerns of the world of righteousness<sup>2</sup>.

4. And this, too, that in fifty-seven of his years there occur the annihilation of the fiendishness of the two-legged race and others, and the subjugation of disease and decrepitude, of death and persecution, and of the original evil of tyranny, apostasy, and depravity; there arise a perpetual verdant growth of vegetation and the primitive gift of joyfulness; and there are seventeen years of vegetable-eating, thirty years of water-drinking, and ten years of spiritual food.

And all mankind remain of one accord in the religion of Aūharmazd, owing to the will of the creator, the command of that apostle, and the resources of his companions.

9. Then those Mazda-worshippers smite, and none are smiting them. 10. Then those Mazda-worshippers produce a longing for a renovation among the existences, one ever-living, ever-beneficial, and ever desiring a Lord. 11. 'Then I, who am Atharmazd, produce the renovation according to the longing among the existences, one ever-living, ever-beneficial, and ever desiring a Lord.'

<sup>3</sup> Reading 'va-bigar-šk-i vand khîm va-kûr-âkhô râs,' and assuming that bigar is Ar. bikr, as an Arabic word is occasionally used in the Dînkard (see Chap. II, 2 n) though very rarely. Bd. XXX, 17, mentions 'fifteen men and fifteen damsels' as assisting Sôshâns at the time of the renovation of the universe.

DINKARD.—BOOK V.

CHAPTER I.

1. The triumph of the creator Aûharmazd, and glory of complete wisdom, is the divine (ahûig) religion of Mazda-worship.

2. The fifth book is about the sayings of the saintly Âtûr-farnbag<sup>1</sup>, son of Farukhzâd, who was the leader of the orthodox, even as to the manuscript which is called Gyémârâ<sup>2</sup>. 3. The collected replies of Âtûr-

<sup>1</sup> He was the leader of the orthodox about A.D. 815–835, and held a religious disputation with the heretic Abális in the presence of the Khalifah Al-Mámnún (A.D. 813–833), as detailed in the Mâdgân-i Gugastak Abális. He was also the first compiler of the Dinkard, probably of its first two Books, which are not yet discovered, as well as of some of the materials for the other Books. (See S. B. E., vol. xxxvii, p. 411, n. 1.)

<sup>2</sup> The name of this MS. can be only guessed. It occurs three times in each of the two MS. authorities, B and K<sub>43</sub>, and the simplest reading of five of these six occurrences would be Sîmrâ, so that the remaining one (Sarmâ) may be neglected as a corruption. A final â in Pahlavi is a very certain indication of a Semitic word, for if a final of similar form occurs in an Irâanian word, it represents either h or kh; so if the name were Irâanian, its most probable reading would be Sîmurkh. But, in § 3, it is intimated that the MS. belonged to an ancient tribe, or congregation (ram); it also seems, from Chap. IV, 8, 9, that the religion of this tribe was not so inconsistent with Zoroastrianism as to prevent its members being taught that orthodox faith; and §§ 4, 5 of the present chapter appear to quote from that MS. some farnbag, son of Farukhzâd, the leader of the orthodox, about several significant questions that are the wonder of the moderns, which are like the friendly words, spoken by him as to those of the ancient tribe<sup>1</sup> (kâdmon-ramân) who call it really their Gyêmarâ, which are obtaining<sup>2</sup> a like wonder for them openly accessible to him<sup>3</sup>.

4. About the unswerving and co-operating chieftainship of those forefathers who went in mutually-friendly command of troops, and the complete enclosure of that tribe within the military control of Bûkht-Narsih<sup>4</sup>. 5. About the disabling of vicious habits and evil deeds, which are entirely connected, and of the heinous demon-worship and mischief which particulars regarding the siege of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar. From these circumstances we may suspect that Âtûr-farnbag, while collecting materials for his Dînkard, had asked some Jewish friends what information their MSS. contained regarding the old Persians, as the two peoples had been in contact, more or less, ever since the time of the Achaemenian dynasty. If he did so enquire, the Jews would naturally search in the Talmud, in which references to the Persians still survive, though the text is no longer complete. The question is, therefore, whether the MS., whose name has been provisionally read Sîmrâ, can have had any connection with the Talmud. It will be at once evident to any Pahlavi student that Pahl. sî may be read gyê equally well, and that we have no better reason for reading Sîmrâ than for the Gyêmarâ, which has been put into the text, as a suggestion that Âtûr-farnbag was really referring to the Gemarâ of the Jews, the supplement to their commentary upon Scripture. Whether this can be clearly proved remains to be seen, and positive evidence seems scanty.

are owing to them, through the ruler Kai-Loharâsp<sup>1</sup> being sent, with Bûkht-Narsih, from the country of Irân to Bêta-Makdis<sup>2</sup> of Arûm, and their remaining in that quarter. 6. And the orthodox belief in the rude particulars of religious custom in the mutual deliberation of those of the tribe, the acquaintance with religion of a boor (durûstakö-1), the difficult arrangements, and the enquirer doubtful of the religion after the many controversial, deliberative, and cause-investigating questions and answers adapted to the importunities of that wordy disciple<sup>3</sup>.

7. About how the accepting of this religion by the prophets before Zarâtûst occurred<sup>4</sup>, how the pure and saintly Zarâtûst of the Spitâmas came<sup>5</sup>, and who will afterwards come as bringers of the same pure and good religion hereafter<sup>6</sup>. 8. That is, of the prophets, apostles, and accepters of the religion, there were they who accepted it concisely and completely such as Gâyômard was, from whom came irregularly (durûstakö) such as Masyê and Styâmak, Hâôshâng, Tâkhmôrup, Yim, Frêûn, Mânûskîhar, the Sâmân, the Kayân, and also many other leaders in those times<sup>7</sup>. 9. And their acceptance expressly at various times is produced for action, and thereby the adversity of the creatures is removed, benefit and prosperity are sought, the world is controlled, and the creator and good creations are propitiated.

CHAPTER II.

1. In the pure light and equal to the archangels—collected together and reckoned together, since the original creation, and completely unmixed—Zaratûst was spiritually fashioned and provided undefectively for the acceptance and propagation of the religion in the world<sup>1</sup>. 2. And when he is sent for the manifestation of restrained saintliness (môkth) and bodily substance, great glory and radiance become as much discernible in him as the same had come into the posterity of Yim who are Pôrûshâspô<sup>2</sup>, his father, and Dûkdâub<sup>3</sup> who is his mother; and also while he is being born and for the duration of life, he produced a radiance, glow, and brilliance from the place of his own abode, that issued intensely and strongly, like the splendour of fire, to distant lands<sup>4</sup>.

3. Also about the wizards and witches, tyrants, Kigs, and Karaps, and other miscreants who have produced outrage for him during his birth and childhood, with desire for his destruction; who have manifestly come about his death or disablement, and even so far as those who have come into the visible assembly about the destruction of his glory and other causes of helplessness<sup>5</sup>. 4. And also including the wolves and other wild beasts, to whom he was cast forth by those of Pôrûshâspô's kinsmen who were wizards, and the kindred of those frequenting demon-worship, but only as a test<sup>1</sup>.

5. In like manner it is declared that, on account of Vohûmanô being welcome to him, he laughed outright at birth<sup>2</sup>. 6. His coming for conference with Aûharmazd<sup>3</sup>, and owing to his accepting the religion, Aharman and many demons and fiends have come to him with exhibition of fear, offering of service, and the argument and entreaty of supplicants; and all these have returned from him disapprovingly, defeatedly, and confusedly, through the pure proclamation of his Avesta, the unique perfection of Aûharmazd's will<sup>4</sup>, and the indication of a prepared armament (vîrâstö-zênh), a declared reward, a powerful sovereignty, and a way of injury to the destroyer.

7. Also the triumph of the sacred beings in the end, and the peculiarity of the joint control of the demons; how, before that, they rushed openly into the world and have dwindled, their bodily forms are shattered<sup>5</sup>, and they are so converted into secret decay, that their supplicants, deceived and deceivers, became awful disputants through confession of it.

8. And when, through completely accepting the religion from Aûharmazd, he came to the obedient king Kai-Vistasp to attract those of the world, he exhibited glorious actions of many kinds and the smiting of demons and fiends ; and he openly spoke the thoughts of king Vistāsp and many of the multitude about hidden matters<sup>1</sup>, thus : ' A person is possessing life only by destiny, and without his body, but with a like destiny, the person possessing life is restored ; ' he was also opposing many wizards, demon-worshippers, demon-consulters, and those seduced by<sup>2</sup> deceivers who are awful disputants.

9. And this was the utterance of those twelve stars whose names are those of the twelve zodiacal constellations, and the primitive learned of Bāpel<sup>3</sup>, that have come to these, who are asking questions of the chief rulers of Khvantras, have to justify it, in the controversy, with the spiritual and material customs and rude observances which are diversely manifested, onwards from the time of Yim the splendid ; and the evidence of it, discernible with him, was that of Vohūmanō, Ashavahistō, the fire, and some other good spirits<sup>4</sup>.

10. Afterwards, too, the estimating and weighing of the whole utterance of the religion of Aūharmazd were held out by him to Vistāsp and those of the world, as very accountably a wonder ; and further, too, he remained as it were more conflicting with fellow-disputants than his own words opposing the fellow-disputants.

11. Also when, through the effect of glory and the struggle for being saved, every class of apostles and prophets and manifestation of tokens and such-like were, with certain and striking evidence, casting down blessings, even thereupon the obedient king

Kai-Vistâsp's fear of the adversary of religion, and also other causes, arose, on account of which he was then accepting the propagation of the religion<sup>1</sup>, when its great glory and beauty<sup>2</sup> were seen by him.

12. At first, Zarîr<sup>3</sup>, Spend-dâd<sup>4</sup>, Frashôstar, and Gâmâsp<sup>5</sup>, several of the realm who were noble, conspicuous, and well-acting, the good and princes of mankind, beheld visibly the will and desirableness of Aûharmazd and the archangels, and the progressive religion of the creatures, fit for those completely victorious (hûkîragânîg).

13. Lastly, the seizure and capturing (gîrinisnö) by the demons are beheld and watched; and they have remained opposing, owing to the number of idolators competing wranglingly. 14. And much conflict and slaughter occurred, which arose purely, so that the mingling of the religion in the world proceeded<sup>6</sup>.

15. There are also his pure new bringers and complete controllers of the same religion, Aûshêdar<sup>7</sup>, Aûshêdar-mâh<sup>8</sup>, and Sôshâns<sup>9</sup>; and through the complete progress of this religion of Aûharmazd, all the good creatures become without disturbance and all-radiant<sup>10</sup>.

CHAPTER III.

1. About that which is manifested as regards the propitiousness, forward intellect, and complete virtue of Zaratûst, it is openly declared that, according to his explaining statements, there occurred such events as the victory of Kai-Vistâsp and the Irânians over Argâsp<sup>1</sup> and an army of Khyôns and other foreigners of innumerable kinds, and details on that subject; also other assistance of Vistâsp and those of the realm in other necessities.

2. The killing of Zaratûst himself by Brâdrô-rêsh<sup>2</sup> the Tûr; the provision of a chariot by Sritô<sup>3</sup> of the Visraps; and whatever is on those subjects.

3. Also, specially, matters in the times to come, each consecutively, when therein arrive devastators such as Alexander<sup>4</sup>, and the killer of Akrê-khiradô<sup>5</sup>, Mahrkûs<sup>6</sup>, Dahâk<sup>7</sup>, and other devastators; extenders of belief (vîravîsn-vâlân) such as the Messiah (Mashikh), Mânih<sup>8</sup>, and others; periods such as the steel age<sup>9</sup>, that mingled with iron, and others; and organizers, restorers, and introducers of religion, such

4. The formation of custom, and the indications which have come to manifestation and will arrive at various periods; and the proclamation of these, too, by Gâmâsp<sup>6</sup>, from the teaching of Zarattûst, is what he wrote, together with the Avesta and Zand, upon oxhides, and it was written with gold, and kept in the royal treasury<sup>7</sup>. 5. And it was from it the highpriests of the rulers made many copies; and afterwards, too, it is from it that it happened, both to the less intelligent and the corrupters, that they were introducing different opinions and different views.

CHAPTER IV.

1. About the selectness and perfection of the race of Irân, that is, how the destroyer and the mingling of defects came into the creation, first into the distribution of the race [of mankind]<sup>8</sup> from the children of Siyâmak<sup>9</sup>, and good intellect, good disposition, proper affection, proper praise, proper modesty, observance of hope, liberality, truth, generosity, good friendship, and other capability, glory, and proper duty are more particularly included for Fravâk<sup>1</sup>, and again altered for frontier peoples.

2. Such-like goodness and glory, again, through selection from a promiscuous origin—even till the coming on of various new contaminations, from the demons, among the children of Fravâk—were for Hâôshâng and Vâêgered<sup>2</sup>, as Hâôshâng through superior glory was ruler of the world, and Vâêgered through provincial government (dahyûkâñh) became the cultivator and cherisher of the world; and their well-destined descendants<sup>3</sup> aggrandized the race of the monarchs among the well-born provincial governors (dahyûkân).

3. In union, such-like glory and goodness proceeded, mutually connected, in various ages as settled by the annals (mâñigân), and the frontiers of Atûr<sup>4</sup> are penetrated; also in various annals there were in succession such men as Tâkhmôrup, Yim, Frêdûn the Aspigân, and Airté of Irân, the progenitor of Mânûs, Mânûs-khvârnar, and Mânûsâhar<sup>5</sup>.

4. And, besides including this one, who was a monarch of superior glory, and other monarchs such as are also in the same race<sup>6</sup>, the Kayâns<sup>7</sup> were

6. The creator Aûharmazd has informed Nêryôsang<sup>1</sup>, his own reminder, that a similar instance is the supreme Zarâtûstship, and the glory of the religion due to the same; also many other reasons, which are recountable, are declared in the Avesta, indications known only to an Irânian person of the best lineage. 7. And this, too, he has said, namely: 'Great glory and goodness of this description are appropriatable by the same race, and are even now<sup>2</sup> visibly manifest.'

8. About what are the requirements of the tribe of those who call this really their Gyêmarâ and how they are effected by our acquaintance with revelation, that is, by much recitation of it; only, several occasions (yávar i-kand) are necessary in these times. 9. Also action and precaution are possible for them, and among the actions and precautions one is to assume more especially law and custom, and whatever was perverted by us and again made true; and, as to those taught, several persons who are intellectual, seeking means, and friends of the soul, have come to teach complete delusions to them; also for the same tribe and whomever it is proper to teach, when it is necessary for them, even a worldly

CHAPTER XII.

1. About the coming of the religion at a given time being a resemblance such-like as the birth of a child through two united powers, which are the reception of semen by females in procreation, and delivering it back to the fathers, and a period of struggling and intermingling, especially by two means: a monarchy with<sup>2</sup> religion of the same tenets (ham-vâk-dêñôih), and the existence of similar tenets to those of the monarchy in the custom of the religion. 2. The religion of the Mazda-worshippers, when the period of material

<sup>1</sup> Zâd-sparam was Dastûr of Sirkân, about thirty parasangs south of Kirmân, in A.D. 881. At a later date, probably about A.D. 900, he compiled three series of Selections, from religious texts then extant, and these have been preserved by the Parsis in the same MSS. as contain the Dâdistân-i Dînîk (see the Introduction). The first eleven chapters of this first series of Selections have been already translated in S. B. E., vol. v, pp. 155-186, as they refer to some of the subjects detailed in the Bundahis. The remaining chapters are here translated, except the last which refers to the Nasks and Gâthas, and will be found in S. B. E., vol. xxvii, pp. 401-405. The MS. authorities for the text are K35 and T (see p. 2 and Introduction).

organization is being converted again into a spiritual nature, became manifest on the earth, first through Spendarmad<sup>1</sup> and afterwards through Aûharmazd, like the reception of a child by mothers and delivering it back to the fathers.

3. The manifestation of the religion through Spendarmad was at that time when Frâsiyâv<sup>2</sup> kept back the water from the country of Irân, and brought the water again; in damsel form she was a speaker for its manifestation, in reply to foreigners, at the house of Mânuséhar<sup>3</sup>, the monarch of the country of Irân. 4. She was also dressed, and wore radiant clothing which shone out on all sides for the length of a Hâsar<sup>4</sup>, which is a distance, like a Parasang; and, tied on her waist, she wore a golden sacred girdle which was the religion of the Mazda-worshippers itself.

5. As to the belt of the religion, it is that to which are connected the thirty-three fetters upon the thirty-three sins<sup>5</sup>, according to which all sin is divided; so that (kâ) the damsels, by whom the tied sacred girdle of Spendarmad was seen, have become impetuous (taftigö) after that for a tied girdle, on account of its seeming beautiful.

6. And this was the motherhood which is supplied through Spendarmad, as a gift, in the year 528 before Zarātūst came out to his conference<sup>1</sup>, which is one of their statements from the annals of the religion in a manuscript of the ancients.

7. The name of Zarātūst is also cited on the earth at 300 years before his conference<sup>2</sup>. 8. For Irān, at the supplication even of the priests in the land, and for the sake of the pacification of a dispute arisen, Atharmazd produced a great ox, by whom the boundary of Irān next to Tūrān was intimated by pawing with his hoofs, and he was kept in a jungle. 9. Whenever contention arose, the boundary was fully made known by that ox, until it was the wish of Kāt-Ūs to take, fully covetously, a portion of the land of Tūrān back into Irān, and he saw that the ox is about to act very ill-naturedly, because it was not besought with forms which were prescribed for it, where a boundary was intimated by it<sup>3</sup>.

10. There were seven brothers, and he who was

<sup>1</sup> If this coming to conference with the spirits be 'the coming of the religion,' in the thirtieth year of Vīrāsp's reign, then, according to Bundahis chronology, these 528 years will carry us back to twenty-eight years before the accession of Mānūskīhar. As any alteration in the date of Mānūskīhar's accession would disturb the millennial arrangement of Bd. XXXIV, it is probable that some copyist has miswritten the ciphers, and we ought to read 428. This legend appears not to occur elsewhere.

<sup>2</sup> According to Bd. XXXIV, 7, Kāt-Ūs reigned from 360 to 210 years before 'the coming of the religion.' At this point a dislocation of the text occurs in all existing MSS., owing to the misplacement of a loose folio in some unknown copy written before 1530; the contents of this folio, §§ 8-16, are found in the existing MSS. three folios further on (after Chap. XIV, 14), and are here restored to their original position, as determined by the meaning of the text.

<sup>3</sup> T has 'by that ox.' This legend is also told in Dk. VII, ii, 62-66.

the seventh was called Sritô<sup>1</sup> the Seventh, the largest in body and chief in strength, belonging to those instructed in many subjects for Kai-Ùs, and he was among his princes. 11. Kai-Ùs summoned him into his presence and ordered him thus: 'Go and kill that ox in the jungle!'

12. Sritô went, and the ox whom he wished to kill expostulated with him, in human words, thus: 'Do not kill me! for though thou canst kill me, he whose guardian spirit is in the Hôm, the death-dispeller, will also become manifest on the earth, he whose name is Zarâtûst of the Spitâmas<sup>2</sup>, and will proclaim thy bad action in the world. 13. And the distress in thy soul becomes such as is declared in revelation thus: "As it occurs to him, so it does to Vadak<sup>3</sup>, when they mention his iniquity," and thy death becomes the like and, owing to death, it is mixed up with hers (that is, owing even to hers is the death of Sritô).'

14. When those words were heard by him, Sritô turned back, and went again to Kai-Ùs; also by his manner, and even apart from this, he stated<sup>4</sup> what the ox had spoken with awfulness, and also thus:

<sup>1</sup> Sritô, the seventh son (compare Dk. VII, ii, 64), is not easy to identify. He could not have been Thrita the father of Keresâspa, because this Thrita the Sâmân is said to have been a third son in Pahl. Yas. IX, 30 (Sp.). He may have been Sritô of the Vîsraps, whose soul visited Vîrstâsp in the latter part of his reign, about 350 years later, regarding which a legend is related in Dk. VII, vi, 2-11, and again mentioned in Dk. V, iii, 2; but there is a want of corresponding details for identification.

<sup>4</sup> T has 'also by his manner he intimated and separately

'I am more desirous than any one who is in the earth created by righteousness, that you should now order destruction for the ox.'

15. And Kai-Ús uttered his will, with the conviction of superior wisdom, thus : 'It is not certain whether he whose guardian spirit is in the Hôm, the death-dispeller, is himself, or not ; and if he be, and be born<sup>1</sup>, whether he will become manifest, or not ;' and he commanded with severity, thus : 'Go and kill it !'

16. And Sritô spoke thus : 'It is not that I am without strength to kill, because its reprieve by me was owing to its remonstrance, mentioned to me, that a high-priest is to arise<sup>2</sup>'

17. So it is declared thus, in another revelation (dêñô zagâi)<sup>3</sup>, when the Tûrânians were backward in heart, Kai-Ús spoke thus : 'Go out to a certain jungle, in which dwell many chiefs of the witches, and they will cut thee up without any striving of heart.'

18. And Sritô went up to the jungle, where many witches saw him, who kept their jaws open, and they spoke about the handsome man thus : 'Slay and do not spare !' 19. And compassion having gone out of his heart, he went back to the other jungle and, with his fist, he broke the back of the ox in three places ; and the ox, awfully convulsed (skiftö bar-hamakö), kept up an outcry.

20. After the slaughter of the ox, owing to its convulsed state which was heard by him, the remembrance of it then became grievous to Sritō; and he went back to Kai-Ūs, and informed him how it was, and begged him that he should finish off by slaying him<sup>1</sup>, because his life was not desirable.

<sup>2</sup> The misplaced folio, which begins with § 8, ends here, but it is not quite certain that a few lines of text are not still missing.

21. Kai-Ūs spoke thus: 'Shall I slay thee, for it was not designed by thee?'

22. And Sritō spoke thus: 'If thou wilt not slay me, then I shall slay thee.'

23. Again Kai-Ūs spoke thus: 'Do not thou slay me, for I am the monarch of the world.'

24. Sritō continued his discontent, until Kai-Ūs ordered him thus: 'Go out to a certain jungle; because a witch in the shape of a dog is in it, and she will slay thee.'

25. Then Sritō went out to that jungle, and that witch in the shape of a dog was seen by him; after he smote the witch, she became two; and he constantly smote them till they became a thousand, and the host (girādō) of them slew Sritō on the spot.

CHAPTER XIII.

1. About the glory of Zarātūst becoming manifest even before his birth, it is thus declared, that forty-five years before the time when Zarātūst came out to his conference<sup>2</sup>, when Frēnō gave birth to the mother of Zarātūst<sup>3</sup>, whom they called Dūkdak, it

<sup>2</sup> That is, forty-five years before he was thirty years old (see Chap. XXI, 1-14).

<sup>3</sup> It is necessary to translate in this manner, to agree with Dk. VII, ii, 3, but the text, which is ambiguous, runs as follows:—
*amat Frēnōg (Frēnōf?) Zarātūst am, zyañān Dūkdakōg kaftuntō.

came down from the endless light, in the manner of fire, and mingled with the fire which was before her; and from the fire it mingled with the mother of Zarātūst<sup>1</sup>.

2. For three nights it was manifest, to all passers-by, as a species of fire in the direction of the house, and passers on the road always saw great radiance.

3. Also when she became fifteen years old, the radiance of that glory which was in her, was even such that, on the path she was walking along, its brightness was then shed by her<sup>2</sup>.

4. About the combination of Zarātūst, whose guardian spirit is revered; that is, his guardian spirit, in the Hōm, and his glory are given the cow's milk, by his father and mother drinking it up<sup>3</sup>; and his spiritual life (ahvō) came into the combination, as was proclaimed by his statements in the manuscript about the Guidance of the Ceremonial<sup>4</sup>.

5. About the backward connection of Zarātūst with Aūharmazd, through the two who are Yim, the best of the worldly existences, and Néryōsang of the spirits. 6. The enumeration of the lineage of Zarātūst is Zarātūst, son of Pôrûshaspô<sup>5</sup>, of Purtarâspô, zérkhûntô; which might also be translated thus: 'when Frêñô, the mother of Zarātūst, whom they called Dûkdak, was born.' This Frêñô, whether mother or daughter, does not seem to correspond with any Freni mentioned in the Avesta.

CHAPTER XIV.

1. About the wonderful striving of the fiend for the destruction of Zarâtûst. 2. When it became near to his birth, the Fever demon, the Pain demon, and the Wind demon of Aharman, each one with 150 demons, have come out to kill Zarâtûst, and from his spirit they have gone forth to his mother. 3. And she is hurried from there by Fever, Pain, and Wind; and at the distance of one league (parasang) there was a wizard, Impudent (Storkö) by name, who was the most medical of wizards; in hope of practice he stood up from his seat, as she stopped in her progress.

4. A messenger of Aûharmazd uttered a cry thus: 'Do not go to a wizard! for they are not healing (bêshazinidâr) for thee; but go back to the house, wash thy hands on the morrow with cow's butter held over the fire, also burn (tâpö)<sup>1</sup> firewood and incense for thy own self and thy progeny which is in thy womb.' 5. And she acted accordingly and became well<sup>1</sup>; and the co-operators of the demon, and those of equal power, who had not obtained their remedy from her body, are again exposed<sup>2</sup>, and spoke thus: 'On account of the existence of fire from all sides we have not succeeded; it is a help for every one who is her friend more than opponent; therefore it was not for us, because of the power within her.'

6. The same night as she gave birth, Aharman selected commanders and arrayed his champions (gūrd); there are some who are with one thousand demons, and there are some who are with two thousand demons; pursuing and attacking they have contended. 7. The opposing stand of the sacred beings<sup>3</sup>, especially of the glory itself at the family<sup>4</sup> fire, was manifest at that birth; and for its splendour and brightness (padrakō), settled opposite a distant place, they have then found no remedy.

8. At last, Aharman sends Akōmanō<sup>5</sup> on, and spoke to him thus: 'Thou canst be very spiritual, who canst be most intimate; thou canst go with deceit into the mind of Zaratûst, and make him turn

<sup>2</sup> T has 'and all the co-operators who had entered her body, and those of equal power who had reached them, returned helpless from them.'

<sup>3</sup> Thus summarized in Dk. VIII, xiv, 2:—'Also about the arrival of both spirits, the good one for developing, and the evil one for destroying; the victory of the good spirit, and the rearing of Zaratûst.' The 'rearing' is continued in Chaps. XV-XX.

his mind to us who are demons.' 9. And Aūharmazd sends Vohūmanō on against him; Akōmanō advanced to the front, and had come forward to the door, and wished to go inside.

10. Vohūmanō schemingly (kārakōgarīhā) turned<sup>1</sup> back, and exclaimed to Akōmanō thus: 'Go inside!' 11. Akōmanō imagined thus: 'There is nothing to be accomplished by me of what was mentioned to me, for Vohūmanō has gone back.'

12. And Vohūmanō went inside, and mingled with the reason (vārōm) of Zarātūst, and Zarātūst laughed outright<sup>2</sup>, for Vohūmanō is a gratifying spirit.

13. Also seven wizards<sup>3</sup> were seated before him, and owing to the light in the dwelling, his having laughed at birth was conveniently seen, which is opposed to the habit of the rest of mankind who cry out at birth and are quite terrified.

14. Also, at the same time of birth, he authoritatively accepted the religion from Aūharmazd, as it is stated in revelation, that he spoke at birth thus: 'As is the will of the spiritual lord (ahvō) mayst thou be who art the officiating priest (zōtō) (that is, mayst thou be the leader of the creatures)<sup>4</sup>.'

15. As Zarātūst, on account of his worldly body, spoke with a worldly voice, Aūharmazd spoke in reply to him, on account of the spirits, thus: 'So

<sup>4</sup> This is one form of the Pahlavi Ahunavair (see Dk. IX, xxiv, 4). At this point the text in the MSS. is interrupted by the erroneous insertion of Chap. XII, 8-16, the contents of a loose folio in some former copy, which have been restored to their original position in this translation.

mayst thou be the priestly authority (rad shâe), and so mayst thou be virtuous, owing to whatsoever righteousness occurs; and I confidently proclaim thuce righteous (that is, I am thy controller) !'

16. Another day, Pôrûshaspô went and enquired of the wizards who kept in front at the place, thus : ' What is the cause when infants cry out at birth, beyond that which occurs when they laugh outright ? ' 17. And they replied thus : ' Because those who are made to cry have seen mortality as their end, and those having laughed have seen their own righteousness.'

CHAPTER XV.

1. About the brothers who were a band of opponents of Zarâtûst. 2. The Karaps and Aûsikhshes<sup>3</sup> were brothers' sons, and have become the devastation (gâstâragîh) of the Irânians; the devastators of the Irânians (Erânân) were from Kôkharêd<sup>4</sup>, and Kôkharêd was born from Aeshm and Mânûsak, the sister of Mântukhâr<sup>5</sup>. 3. At the place where Zarâtûst was born, five brothers have been, whose names were Brâd-rûkhsh, Brâd-rôyisn, Brâd-rêsh the Tûr, Hazân, and Vadast<sup>6</sup>. 4. Their brotherhood of five—of which the middle one was Brād-resh the Tūr, who became more of an adversary of Zarātūst—was a semblance of the brotherhood of five who were sons of Pōrūshaspō, of whom the middle one was Zarātūst.

5. Of the four brothers of Zarātūst, the names of the two before Zarātūst were Ratūstar and Rangūstar, and of the two after him Nodarīgā and Nivēdis.

6. The middle position of Zarātūst is for the reason that he is so produced at that time, as an intermediate of the early narrators and the later narrators, that three millenniums came before him and three after.

7. So that he has prescribed to the creatures in what manner he would teach the ancients as to what had occurred, and in what manner it is also to be done as regards what will occur; as is stated in the Gāthas<sup>2</sup> thus: ‘Both those I ask of thee, O Aūharmazd! even whatever has happened till now, and whatever shall happen henceforth?’

CHAPTER XVI.

i. About the trials (aūzmāyisnō) which occurred has to be guessed so as to give a probable meaning to the Pahlavi spelling. The writing of the last name is complicated; it is written س and س in the two MS. authorities, which forms can be most obviously read Yasam and Saman, but Saman can also be read as the Zvāris yad=—dast, ‘a hand;’ this leads to the conclusion that the original name underlies the form Vadast, and this is confirmed by the name of the Karap Vāēdvāist written at full length in Dk. VII, iv, 21–24. See ibid. ii, 9 n.

<sup>1</sup> These brothers seem unmentioned elsewhere, and the existence of the elder two would imply another mother. The pronunciation of the names is guessed.

to him whose practice was lawful, and the signs of prophecy that are seen therein, it is thus declared, namely; ‘Another day, when the child had been born, Pôrûshaspô called one of those five brothers of the race of Karaps, and spoke thus: “Fully observe the marks and specks of my son Zaratûst.”’

2. The Karap went and sat down before Zaratûst, and the head of Zaratûst was thereupon severely twisted by him, in order that he should be killed; but he, being fearless, watched the wizards whose terror was distressing<sup>1</sup>. 3. As it was in those ten nights for hospitality, Aûharmazd sent Spendarmad, Arêdvîsûr, and Ardât-fravard<sup>2</sup> down to the earth, by way of female care; thereupon no variation occurred to the child, and, further, the hand of that Karap was withered<sup>3</sup>, and that wizard demanded the life<sup>4</sup> of Zaratûst from Pôrûshaspô for the harm from him, which sprang upon himself from his own action.

4. At the same time Pôrûshaspô took Zaratûst, and gave him to the Karap, that he might do with him according to his own will. 5. He seized him and threw him out, at the feet of the oxen who were going on a path to the water; the leader of that drove of oxen stood still in his vicinity, and 150 oxen, which walked behind it, were kept away from him thereby; and Pôrûshaspô took him, and carried him back to the house<sup>5</sup>.

6. Also the second day, the Karap threw him out at the feet of the horses; and the leader of the horses stood still in the vicinity of Zarātūst, and 150 horses which walked behind it, were kept away from him thereby; and Pōrūshaspō took him, and carried him back to the house<sup>1</sup>.

7. Also the third day, firewood is gathered together by the Karap, and Zarātūst is deposited on it by him, the fire is stirred up by him, yet with the same result (ham-būn-ik), the child is not burnt by it, and those marks, which existed and were made upon him, were a preservation from it<sup>2</sup>.

8. And the fourth day, he is thrown by the Karap into the lair (āshyānakō) of a wolf; the wolf was not in the lair, and when it wished to go back to the den (strākō), it stopped when it came in front of some radiance, in the manner of a mother, at the place where its cub was. 9. In the night, Vohūmanō and Srōsh the righteous brought a woolly (kūrū-sakō) sheep with udder full of milk into the den, and it gave milk to Zarātūst, in digestible draughts (guvārakō guvārakō), until daylight<sup>3</sup>.

10. In the dawn, the mother of Zarātūst went to that place, in the expectation that it would be necessary to bring a skeleton out of the den, and the woolly sheep came out and ran away; his mother supposed that it was the wolf, and she spoke thus: 'Thou hast devoured to repletion; mayst thou endure for ever without it!' 11. She went farther, and when she saw Zarātūst quite safe, she then took him up and spoke thus: 'I will not give thee to any one during life, not though both the provinces of Rāgh and Nōdar should arrive here together<sup>4</sup>'.

12. Because these princes were among the spiritual from two provinces which are in Âtûr-pâdakân, such as are at sixty leagues (parasang) from Kîst; Zaratûst arose from Râgh, and Vistâsp from Nôdar.

13. And of these two provinces, Râgh was according to the name of Èrikö, son of Dûrêsrôbô, son of Mânûskîhar<sup>1</sup>, from whom arose the race of Zaratûst; and Nôdar was according to the name of Nôdar, son of Mânûskîhar, from whom arose the race of Vistâsp.

CHAPTER XVII.

1. These were his tokens at birth:—One day, one of those five brothers of the Karaps saw Zaratûst, and he looked a long while upwards, downwards, and on all sides around<sup>2</sup>.

2. Pôrûshaspô enquired thus: ‘What was there when thou lookedst upwards, what when thou lookedst downwards, and what when thou lookedst on all sides?’

3. And he replied thus, namely: ‘When I looked upwards, it was for this reason, when I saw that our souls<sup>3</sup> that go up to the sky, will go up to the best

<sup>3</sup> Assuming that the MS. gadâ, ‘glory, or destiny,’ has lost an initial n, with which it was originally nism=Chald. Nîm; ‘the soul;’ as the copyists have not been aware of the existence of this Zvâris equivalent for rûbân, ‘the soul,’ for some centuries, it has been altered into gadâ, by the omission of its first letter, in nearly all but the very oldest existing MSS., such as Kao and Mô in Bd. XV, 3-5, and even there the medial m is really missing, though apparently existing in the final 4; the irregularity of using s for sh is common in Pahlavi.

existence<sup>1</sup>, owing to the words of this soul of mankind. 4. When I looked downwards, I saw that, owing to the action of this one, the demon and fiend, the wizard and witch become buried below the earth, and fall paralyzed back to hell. 5. And when I looked on all sides, I saw that the words of this one will extend through the whole earth; and when they have become as the law of the seven regions, each person is kept clothed with a robe (kapāh) of seven skins, in which the glory of the seven archangels has arisen.'

6. And Brād-rūkhsh the Tūr went forth; when he went to the right side (arakō), Zarātūst hastened away to the left, and when he went to the left side, Zarātūst hastened to the right, and he is thereby concealed from Brād-rūkhsh the Tūr, who has not met with him.

CHAPTER XVIII.

1. About his diverse want of participation (gvīd akhvēsth) with his parents this also is declared, that the demons, at an assembly of wizards, produced an outcry for a conference (ham-vākō lāyisnō) thus: 'That son of Pōrūshaspō is senseless and foolish and secretly corrupted; no one, man or woman, will consider or accept him as exalted.'

2. The tidings came to Pōrūshaspō, and Pōrūshaspō spoke unto Zarātūst thus: 'I thought that I had begotten a son who would become a priest, a warrior, and a husbandman, and now thou wouldst be foolish and secretly corrupted; thou shouldst proceed to the Karaps, so that they may cure thee.'

3. Zaratûst gave answer thus: 'I am he that is thy son, a priest, warrior, and husbandman.' 4. And, by command of Pôrûshaspô he harnessed two horses to a chariot (vardînô), and he went with Pôrûshaspô.

5. When they came to the place according to the decision of Pôrûshaspô, into the presence of one Karap of those said five brethren, that wizard took a cup and made water, and spoke thus: 'This he should drink who is a son of thine, so that he may become well;' and he acted with this conviction, that so he would change to the same nature as theirs.

6. Zaratûst spoke to Pôrûshaspô thus: 'Thou mayst give it back to him who is thy protector and high-priest;' and he arose (âkhégia)<sup>1</sup> and went back to their place.

7. On the way, Zaratûst gave their two horses water, on account of their thirst; and he thought thus: 'Unprofitable was my going to the residence of the Karaps, except in this manner; when, through giving water to the horses, my soul was then expanded.'

CHAPTER XIX.

1. About his interfering talk (andarg-gôbisnôth) with the iniquitous, this also is declared, that one

<sup>1</sup> It has 'he saluted (nîyâyid).'
This legend has not yet been found elsewhere.

day Dūrēsrōbō<sup>1</sup> the Karap, as it were from the same five brethren, came out to the house of Pōrūshaspō; and Pōrūshaspō placed a bowl (gāmakō) of mare's milk before him, and spoke to him thus: 'Consecrate it.'

2. Zaratūst expostulated with Pōrūshaspō thus: 'I will consecrate it.' 3. Pōrūshaspō spoke thus: 'He should consecrate, and the grace is to be offered up by you<sup>2</sup>; and as many as three times they mutually disputed.

4. Then up stood Zaratūst, and his right foot struck at the bowl and emptied it, and he spoke thus: 'I reverence righteousness, I reverence the righteous and the poor, men and women; do thou, O Pōrūshaspō! prepare a portion for him in whom there is worthiness.'

5. And Dūrēsrōbō spoke unto Zaratūst thus: 'As some of my portion of daily food was first thrown away by thee, it is I who will bring it on both thy lives, and will utterly destroy thee.' 6. Zaratūst spoke interruptingly<sup>3</sup> thus: 'With complete mindfulness I will look upon thee with both eyes, and will utterly destroy thee.'

7. And, for a long time, they constantly looked, one at the other, with unshrinking gaze; but the divine nature of Zaratūst is victorious over the witchcraft of that wizard, and Dūrēsrōbō is further disturbed; he also asked for his horse and spoke thus: 'On account of this boy, it is impossible for me to stay.'

<sup>1</sup> So spelt in Zs., but Dūrāsrōbō in Dk.; also the former has always Pōrūshaspō, but the latter Pōrūshāspō. Compare the same legend in Dk. VII, iii, 34-45.

8. He sat upon the horse, and when he had gone a little way, he fell off from the horse, through severe distress, and died ; and the children of his children's children have died upon the same spot<sup>1</sup>.

CHAPTER XX.

1. About the righteousness of his desires it is thus declared, that when he became fifteen years old, the sons of Pōrūshaspō demanded a portion from their father, and their portions are allotted out by him. 2. Among the clothes there was a girdle, the width of which was four finger-breadths; and of the four<sup>2</sup> portions around and the girdle, which it was possible to bring forth, Zarātūst selected the latter and tied it on himself. 3. This was owing to the precepts (parvānakān) of Vohūmanō who came into his reason at birth ; as to whatever is not the custom his mind was now quite closed, and in that which is the custom it was impetuously exercised by him.

4. About his compassionate disposition and the streams of the Arag province<sup>3</sup>, this also is declared,

<sup>2</sup> The MSS. have 'three,' but there were five sons (Chap. XV, 5), and the numbers are written in ciphers which are very easily corrupted.

<sup>3</sup> Pahl. 'Aragistān ēdhāvō (T. dhā)' = 'odha-i Arangistānō' of P. Vd. I, 77 (Sp.); compare Av. 'upa sodhaēshu Rang, hayau,' of Vd. I, 19; Yt. XII, 18. In the Irāzian Bd. XX, 8 we are told that 'the Arang river is that of which it is said that it comes out from Albūrs in the land of Sirak, which they call also Sham (Shám); and it passes on through the land of Egipitōs, which they call also Misti, and there they call it the swift river Egipitōs.' It is that there was a river, and from them the body of a naked woman floated, for the reason that, on account of the strength and swiftness of the river, a woman, except when she was quite naked while she was in it, was not able to pass ; and an old person, such as he who is of seventy years and is called in revelation a Hānō<sup>1</sup>, for want of power (apādiyāvandih rāt), was not able to go back through it by his own strength. 5. Zarātūst came on to the bank of the water, and of women and old people seven persons had come, and are passed on by him, in the manner of a bridge<sup>2</sup>; it was an emblem of the spiritual performers<sup>3</sup> of bridging work, that is, of those providing a passage to heaven.

6. About his liberal disposition it is declared, that the fodder of Pōrūshaspō, which was stored for the beasts of burden, was not only for the beasts of Pōrūshaspō in a scarcity, but also for distribution among the beasts of others; which, owing to their hunger on account of the scarcity, then constantly ate off the tails of each other; and it was given to them plentifully.

7. About his abandoning worldly desire, and his laying hold of righteousness of way, this, too, is declared, that when he became twenty years old, without the consent (bēn akāmakth) of his father and mother, he wandered forth and departed from one of the two mythical rivers which were supposed to bound the Irānian world, and seems to represent the Aras as a northern and the Nile as a western boundary. Arang often becomes Arag in Pahlavi, just as sang becomes sag.

their house, and openly enquired thus: ‘Who is most desirous of righteousness and most nourishing the poor?’ 8. And they spoke thus: ‘He who is the youngest (kēhistō) son of Aūrvaitō-dih<sup>1</sup> the Tūr, who every day gives an iron caldron (gāmak), which is the height of a horse, full of bread and milk and other food, unto the poor.’ 9. Zaratūst went on to that place, and with his co-operation, for the nourishment of the poor, some of the chief men performed duty by carrying forth food for the poor.

10. About his compassion, not only upon mankind, but also his other creatures, this, too, is declared, that a bitch was seen by him, which had given birth to five<sup>2</sup> puppies, and it was three days then that she had not obtained food<sup>3</sup>. 11. Whom-ever she saw, she then advanced her mouth towards him, and became as it were prostrated; Zaratūst provided a remedy, by swiftly bringing up bread for her, but when he was bringing it she had expired.

12. About his own desire for the good quality<sup>4</sup> of a wife, on account also of the will of his parents, and his not mingling his own seed before a suitable obtainment, this, too, is declared, that when his father sought a wife for him, Zaratūst argued with the bride (nēshā) thus: ‘Show me thy face, so that I may find out (barkhām) its kind of appearance, and this, too, whether its appearance be undesirable, or shall not be gratifying;’ and the bride turned away her face from him. 13. And Zaratūst spoke thus:

'Whoever takes away a sight from me, does not practise respect for me.'

14. About his having accepted progress even from the iniquitous, that listened sinfully desirous, who accepted so much advantageousness as was manifest, this, too, is declared, that he came into an assembly who were well known in the place for much knowledge, and he enquired of them thus : 'What is most favourable for the soul ?' 15. And they spoke thus : 'To nourish the poor, to give fodder to cattle, to bring firewood to the fire, to pour Hōm-juice into water, and<sup>1</sup> to worship many demons with words, with the words which are called revelation (dēnō).'<sup>2</sup> 16. Then Zarātūst nourished the poor, foddered the cattle, brought firewood to the fire, and squeezed Hōm into water, but never are any demons whatever worshipped with words by Zarātūst.

CHAPTER XXI.

1. About his coming to thirty years of age it is thus declared, that on the lapse of thirty years onwards from his appearance, on the day Anērān of the month Spendarmad<sup>3</sup>, he had proceeded in that direction in which there occurred the so-called festival of spring (gasnō-i vahār)<sup>4</sup>, forty-five days beyond

<sup>1</sup> T inserts 'not' here, which is clearly wrong, and must have been introduced by some copyist who did not observe that the assembly, though learned, was sinful; and that the object of the anecdote is to exhibit Zarātūst's ability to distinguish between good works and sin, when still untaught by the sacred beings.

new-year's day, at a place become specially noted, where people went, from many quarters, out to the place of festival (gasnökár).

2. When Zaratûst, for the sake of going off to the festival place, halted on the way in walking, he chanced upon a solitary (aêvatâk) plain, and he saw, in a vision, that mankind and a much-adorned worldly existence were kept away to the north, so that all the people in the earth have become fully manifest in the north. 3. And he at the head (pavan têkh) of them was Mêdyômâh, son of Årástâî<sup>1</sup>, even as Årástâî was brother of Pôrûshaspô<sup>2</sup>; Mêdyômâh was the leader of all mankind who have gone out to the presence of Zaratûst, and he became their guide, so that first Mêdyômâh and afterwards the whole material existence are attracted.

4. And about his coming out to the conference, on the lapse of those forty-five days, at the place of festival at dawn on the day Dadvô<sup>3</sup>-pavan-Mitrô of the month Ardvahistô. 5. And Zaratûst, for the purpose of squeezing the Hôm, went forth to the bank of the water of the Dâitih, because it is the river<sup>4</sup> of the conference for the supremacy (patih) of Zaratûst, and is the water of Avân<sup>5</sup> which has consisted of four channels (bêtâ). 6. Zaratûst also

<sup>3</sup> The Pahlavî letters represent Av. dadhvau, 'creator'; compare the Khvârizmian name ڏس of the fifteenth day of the month in Sachau's Albîrûnî, p. 57, l. 35. The date here given is the fifteenth of the second month, as in § 1.

passed on through it; and its first channel was up to the ankle<sup>1</sup>, the second up to the knee, the third up to the parting of the two thighs, and the fourth up to the neck. 7. This was an indicator that his religion comes four times to supremacy; the manifestations of which are through Zarātūst, Aūshēdar, Aūshēdar-māh, and Sōshāns<sup>2</sup>.

8. When he came up from the water, and put on his clothes, he then saw the archangel Vohūmanō<sup>3</sup> in the form (āyūnākō) of a man, handsome, brilliant, and elegant, who wore his hair curve-tailed<sup>4</sup>, because the curved tail is an indication of duality; who had put on and wore a dress like silk, than which there was no making anything superior, for it was light itself; and his height was nine times as much as that of Zarātūst.

9. He also enquired of Zarātūst<sup>5</sup> thus: 'Who mayst thou be, and from whom of them mayst thou be? also what is mostly thy desire, and the endeavour in thy existence?' 10. And he replied thus: 'I am Zarātūst of the Spītāmas; among the existences righteousness is more my desire, and my wish is that I may become aware of the will of the sacred beings, and may practise so much righteousness as they exhibit to me in the pure existence.'

11. And Vohūmanō directed Zarātūst<sup>6</sup> thus: 'Do thou proceed to an assembly of the spirits!' 12. As much as Vohūmanô walked on in nine steps, Zaratûst did in ninety steps, and when he had gone ninety steps farther than him, he saw the assembly of the seven archangels. 13. When he came within twenty-four feet of the archangels, he then did not see his own shadow on the ground, on account of the great brilliancy of the archangels; the position of the assembly was in Irân, and in the direction of the districts on the bank of the water of the Dâith. 14. Zaratûst offered homage, and spoke thus: 'Homage to Aûharmazd, and homage to the archangels!' and he went forward and sat down in the seat of the enquirers.

15. As to the asking of questions by Zaratûst, he enquired of Aûharmazd thus: 'In the embodied world which is the first of the perfect ones, which the second, and which the third?' 16. And Aûharmazd replied thus: 'The first perfection is good thoughts, the second good words, and the third good deeds.'

17. Zaratûst also enquired thus: 'Which thing is good, which is better<sup>1</sup>, and which is the best of all habits?' 18. And Aûharmazd replied thus: 'The title<sup>2</sup> of the archangels is good, the sight of them is better, and carrying out their commands is the best of all habits.'

19. Afterwards he demonstrated the duality of the original evolutions (bûn ga stânô)<sup>3</sup>, and the divergence in each control, and spoke thus: 'Of those spirits, he who was wicked preferred the practice which is iniquitous (Aharman's desire was for the practice which is iniquitous), and the spirit of righteousness, the propitious (Ahamrāz) prefers righteousness<sup>1</sup>. 20. Specially he demonstrated the divergence in each control of the exhibitors of light, and he spoke thus: 'Neither our thoughts<sup>2</sup>, nor desires, nor words, nor deeds, nor religion, nor spiritual faculties agree<sup>3</sup>; he who is loving light, his place is with the luminaries; and he who is loving darkness is with the dark ones<sup>4</sup>'.

21. On the same day also, his omniscient wisdom appeared three times: as regards the same first questions, it pointed out the sky in great light and splendour, and in its exhibition of the prevention of darkness, at the sight of which it becomes an opposing existence as regards that darkness. 22. And it exhibited its own appearance proportionally to the sky, when it kept its head at the summit of the sky, its feet at the bottom of the sky, and its hands reached to both sides of the sky; the sky also kept it covered, in the manner of a garment.

23. The six archangels<sup>5</sup> were manifest by their similar stature (ham-basnīh), in such manner that it is obvious each one successively is apparently one finger's breadth shorter than the other. 24. The archangels exhibited three kinds of achievement

Aûharmazd spoke thus: 'After the establishment of the pure religion, when a dispute occurs in the religion, those who are thy disciples will pour it on to a spiritual lord, they will take it up with the hand, and will thoroughly believe in him who is over the whole embodied existence.' 26. The third was cutting with a knife, and the vital parts (ahvân) becoming visible, which are inside the abdomen, with a flowing forth of blood; and, after the hands are rubbed over it, it became healed. 27. And this is pointed out, namely: 'Thy and thy correligionists' accepting of the pure religion is, as to the steadfast in other religions, such that, through such-like burning of fire, pouring of hot metal, and through an operation with a sharp instrument, there is no perversion from the good religion.'

the upholder of Aūharmazd, came out to a conference on the bank of the water of Dāltih<sup>1</sup>.

3. For the occurrence of the second, which is Vohūmanō's, five animals out of the five species<sup>2</sup> which are the worldly tokens of Vohūmanō, have come with Zarattūst to a conference on Hūgar and Aūsind<sup>3</sup>; and on that day also, before their coming out to the conference, their tongues are fully liberated and spoke with human words. 4. And among the rest<sup>4</sup> is a fish of one species, Arzuvā<sup>5</sup> by name; of those in burrows (khanōigānō) are the white ermine and white marten; of the flying creatures (vāyan-dagān) is the Karsipt<sup>6</sup>; a bird like a species of water-fowl; of the wide-travellers (farākhvō-raftārānō) is the hare which is showing wild beasts the way to the water; and of those suitable for grazing (karakō-argānigān) is the white ass-goat; with human words they also accepted the religion from Aūharmazd. 5. With the chieftainship of the five species they are intrusted, so that the like animals also, with their own voices, and as much as their knowledge is capable, shall recount the powerfulness of the religion.

<sup>5</sup> See Bd. XIV, 26; apparently the same as the Aris, or Kar, the chief of fish, ibid. XVIII, 3, 5; XXIV, 13.

6. And freedom from assault, exemption from persecution, and proper maintenance of the five species of animals, were prescribed by him<sup>1</sup> to Zarātūst with seemingly very awful admonition.

7. For the occurrence of the third questioning, which is Ardavahistō's, the spirits of the fires have come out with Zarātūst to a conference at the Tōgān water<sup>2</sup>; and, in that questioning, care for the proper maintenance of the Varahrān fire<sup>3</sup>, and the propitiation of all fires, is explained to him.

8. For the occurrence of the fourth questioning, which is Shatvēr's, the spirits of the metals have come with Zarātūst to a conference at Sarāt<sup>4</sup>, a settlement on the Mīvān<sup>4</sup>; and he was fully admonished about various proper preservations of the metals, and as to not producing warlike accoutrements of gold.

* 9. For the occurrence of the fifth questioning, which is Spendarmad's, the spirits of the regions, frontiers, stations (aūstāmān), settlements (rūdāstākān), and districts, as many as were desirable, have come out with Zarātūst to a conference where there is a spring (khānigō-aē) which comes out from the Asnavad mountain<sup>6</sup>, and goes into the Dāith, like those of Satavēs who is blowing the Pātrigs<sup>6</sup>.

10. And Zarātūst was also thus ad-

11. For the occurrence of the sixth questioning, which is Khūrdād's, the spirits of seas and rivers have come with Zaratūst to a conference at the Asnavad mountain<sup>1</sup>, and he was told about the care and propitiation of water.

12. For the occurrence of the seventh questioning, which is Amūrdaa's, the spirits of plants have come out with Zaratūst to a conference on the precipitous bank of the Darega<sup>2</sup>, on the bank (bār) of the water of Dālīth, and different places; and he was informed about the care and propitiation of plants.

13. The seven questionings are explained within the length of these winters, which are of five months, and within ten years<sup>3</sup>.

<sup>3</sup> The Pahlavi is rather vague, but it is clear that Zaratūst starts for his conference at thirty years of age (Chap. XXI, 1), returns from it ten years later (Chap. XXIII, 1), and the conversion of Vistāsp occupies two years longer (Chap. XXIII, 5), occurring when Zaratūst was forty-two years old and thirty-five years before his passing away at the age of seventy-seven (Chap. XXIII, 9).

At this point another dislocation of text occurs in all existing

CHAPTER XXIII.

1. On the completion of revelation, that is, at the end of the ten years, Mēdýômâh, son of Árástâh, became faithful to Zaratûst.

2. Afterwards, on having obtained his requests<sup>1</sup>, he came back to the conference of Aûharmazd, and he spoke thus: 'In ten years only one man has been attracted by me.' 3. And Aûharmazd spoke thus: 'There will be days when so few are not attracted by you, who are themselves the occasion of the resurrection of the world; when, apart from Dahâk<sup>2</sup>, the beneficence of the formation of the renovation of the universe attracts every one besides, and the impenitence of Dahâk is destroyed.'

4. When he came out from the presence of Aûharmazd, with the same paradox, he thereby indicated his religion as complete to Spendarmad through his intelligence.

MSS., owing to the accidental interpolation of three loose folios of another text, between this chapter and the next, in some unknown copy written before 1530. In the MSS. the text is written continuously, without division into chapters. But the connection of this chapter with the next one, which is here restored to its proper position, is clearly shown by the reference to the 'ten years' of conference, with which this chapter ends, and the next one begins. The accidentally interpolated text is here classified as Chaps. XXIV and XXV, but its real connections have not yet been traced.

Karaps of Vistāsp, in the manner of opponents (hamēstarāñh), propounded thirty-three enquiries (khvāstakō)<sup>1</sup> to him, so that by command of Vistāsp he became the explainer of those thirty-three enquiries. 6. Of the thirty-three habits<sup>2</sup> of iniquity, come for opposition to the religion of the sacred beings; of the declaration, by revelation, of those thirty-three indications of fetters<sup>3</sup>; and of the restraint of the thirty-three iniquitous practices by the thirty-three best good works, there are statements in revelation. 7. Including the acceptance of the religion by Vistāsp from Zarātūst, after the re-demonstration of its judicially multiform prophecy and spiritual character, which are looked into through the evidence of three speakers about them, the archangels who, with worldly manifestation, have become apparent unto Vistāsp and his counsellors and mighty ones; they are Vohūmanō, Arda-vahistō, and the Būrsin-Mitrō fire<sup>4</sup>.

But 43d is highly improbable for two reasons : first, it would make this date the only one out of chronological order in the series here given ; secondly, it would render it inconsistent with the statement, in Dk. VII, vi, 12, that two priests came, from other regions, to ask Frashôstar about the religion, fifty-seven years after it had been accepted by Zaratûst. By substituting 63d (the Pahlavi cipher most likely to be corrupted into 43d) both these inconsistencies are removed.

Of the six great upholders of the religion there are the two daughters of Zarātūst, whose names are Frēnō and Srītō<sup>2</sup>, with Aharūbō-stōtō, son of Mēdyōmāh<sup>3</sup>, and another three, who are renowned for their religion for a hundred years, who are Vohūnēm<sup>4</sup> that is born in the fortieth year of the religion, Sēnō<sup>5</sup> is afterwards born and passes away in the two-hundredth year, and as to his hundred-disciplesdom<sup>6</sup>, it exists day and night till the three-hundredth year: 12. Afterwards the religion is disturbed and the monarchy is contested (gangi-altō).

13. About the three customs (dādō) which Zarātūst prescribed as the best:—The first of them is this: ‘Do not go without others, except with magisterial authority (apatkār radhā);’ the second is: ‘Though they shall proceed unlawfully as to you, consider your actions lawfully beforehand;’ and the third is: ‘Next-of-kin marriage, for the <sup>1</sup> As kabed is Zvāris for ‘many,’ we may assume that kabed-ūs = Av. nom. pōurus which usually becomes pouru in compounds; so that the compound name, or title, in the text, probably represents Av. Pouruspādha (Yt. X, 109, 111), ‘having many troops,’ a suitable title for Akht the wizard (Av. Akhyā of Yt. V, 82) who is said, in Cf. I, 2, to have invaded a district with an army of seven myriads. He was killed, in Zoroastrian fashion, by the recital of a religious formula.

CHAPTER XXIV.

1. About the five dispositions of priests, and the ten admonitions with which all instruction as to religion is connected<sup>2</sup>.
2. Of those five dispositions the first is innocence.
3. The second is discrimination among<sup>3</sup> thoughts, words, and deeds; [to fully distinguish the particulars of destruction from indestructiveness, such as

<sup>1</sup> This chapter ends the first series of Selections of Zâd-sparam, and is immediately followed in the MSS. by a second series. It is evident from the extent of this chapter, as compared with the amount of text contained in the three misplaced folios (see p. 162, n. 3), that this chapter could have occupied only about one folio and a half in the dislocated MS., so that the second series must have commenced on the same folio as contained the end of this chapter, and that Chaps. XXIV, XXV cannot have belonged to this series. The three misplaced folios contain two distinct texts; the first (Chap. XXIV) is an Irâanian version of the Five Dispositions of priests and the Ten Admonitions, and is here translated; the second (Chap. XXV) contains some details about the Nâsks and Gâthas, and has been already translated in S.B.E., vol. xxxvii, pp. 401-405.

<sup>2</sup> This Irâanian version of the Dispositions and Admonitions is more complete than the Indian version, which, like the Bundahîs, was brought from Irân five or six centuries ago, and is found in two MSS (Pt. and J) written in India about 500 years ago, and now in the libraries of Dastûrs Dr. Peshotan and Dr. Jâmâsp, respectively. Passages which occur only in the Irâanian version are here enclosed in brackets, and other differences between the two versions are mentioned in the notes.

noxious creatures from cattle ; and of production from unproductiveness, such as the righteous and worthy from the wicked and unworthy].

4. The third is authoritativeness, because that priestly master is always wiser and speaking more correctly who is taught wisely and teaches with more correct words.

5. The fourth is to<sup>1</sup> [understand and consider the ceremonial as the ceremonial of Aūharmazd, and the essentials with all goodness, beneficence, and authority; to be steadfast in his religion, and to consider the indications of protection (sāyag)<sup>2</sup> which are established for his religion. 6. To maintain the reverence of the luminaries prayerfully, also the reverence of the emanations<sup>3</sup> from the six<sup>4</sup> archangels, be they fire, be they earth, or be they of bodily form, and of the creatures which are formed by them ; also the pure cleansing from dead matter, menstruation, bodily refuse, and other hurtfulness ; this is in order that they may be characterised, and thereby constituted, as better-principled, more sensible<sup>5</sup>, and purer, and they may become less faulty. 7. The reverence of mankind is to consider authoritatively about knowledge and property ; the reverence of cattle is about fodder, little hardship, and moderate maintenance ; the reverence of plants is about sowing and ripening for the food of the worthy. 8. The ceremonial which is glorifying all

<sup>1</sup> Ind. vers. has only : 'to celebrate the ceremonial of the sacred beings with the correct words, inward prayers, and complete mastery of the text (narm-nasgfhā) in the ritual.' It omits §§ 6-8 altogether.

<sup>5</sup> Or 'more fragrant ;' hū-bōdtar has both meanings.

the sacred beings, praises the luminaries and worldly creations improperly, and is antagonistic to them, because complete glorification is proper through complete recitation of the ritual; and the ceremonial of any one whatever is his own proper duty professionally, so long as it is possible to keep proceeding with very little sinfulness].

9. The fifth is to struggle prayerfully<sup>1</sup>, day and night, with your own fiend<sup>2</sup>, and all life long not to depart from steadfastness, nor allow your proper duty<sup>3</sup> to go out of your hands.

10. And the first of those ten admonitions is to proceed with good repute, for the sake of occasioning approving remarks as to<sup>4</sup> the good repute of your own guardian and teacher, high-priest and master<sup>5</sup>.

11. The second is to become awfully restraining from evil repute, for the sake of evil repute not occurring to relations and guardians.

12. The third is not to beat your own teacher with a snatched-up stick, and not to bring scandal upon his name, for the sake of annoying him, by uttering that which was not heard from your own teacher.

13. The fourth is that whatever is taught liberally by your own teacher, you have to deliver back to the worthy, for the sake of not extorting a declaration of renown from the righteous<sup>6</sup>.

14. The fifth is that the reward of doers of good

works and the punishment of criminals have to be established by law, for the sake of progress<sup>1</sup>.

15. The sixth is to keep the way of the good open to your house, for the sake of making<sup>2</sup> righteousness welcome in your own abode.

16. The seventh is that, for the sake of not developing the fiend insensibly in your reason, you are not to keep it with the religion of the good<sup>3</sup>, nor to remain in impenitence of sin.

17. The eighth<sup>4</sup> is that, for the sake of severing the fiend from the reason, you have to force malice away from your thoughts; and to become quickly repentant of sin.

18. The ninth is to fully understand the forward movement<sup>5</sup> of the religion, also to keep the advancing of the religion further forwards, and to seek your share of duty therein; and on a backward movement, when adversity happens to the religion, to have the religion back again, and to keep your body in the continence (maka vadh) of religion.

19. The tenth is that there is to be a period of obedience (Srōshdārh) towards the ruler and priestly authority, the high-priesthood of the religious<sup>6</sup>.

<sup>2</sup> Ind. vers. inserts: 'a token of,' and T has: 'making the righteousness of the sacred beings in writing welcome.'

<sup>3</sup> Ind. vers. has: 'not to maintain malice with the good,' which is more probable, and kēnō, 'malice,' is easily corrupted into dēnō, 'religion,' in Pahlavi writing.

OBSERVATIONS.

1. The references, in this index, are to books, chapters, and sections ; the chapters being denoted by the larger ciphers.
2. Though different forms of the same name may occur in the text, only one form is usually given in the index, to which the references to all forms are attached ; except when the forms differ so much as to be widely separated in the index.
3. Pāzand forms are printed in italics, as their orthography is usually corrupt. In all such italicised names any letters which would elsewhere be italic are printed in roman type.
4. Abbreviations used are :—Av. for Avesta, Dk. for Dinkard, Int. for Introduction, m. for mountain, meas. for measure, MS. for manuscript, n. for footnote, Pahl. for Pahlavi, patron. for patronymic, r. for river, Zs. for Selections of Zād-spāram.

ERRATUM.

P. 20, l. 4. The name of the district of Alâk should probably be read Arâk, as the province is called Râgh in Zs. XVI, 13.
